NAZI TERRORISM GROWS; JEWISH STORES CLOSED

Five More Slain in Day of Violence.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 8.—The anti-foreign and particularly the anti-Jewish campaign fostered by Chancellor Adolf Hitler's National Socialist party hit the Ruhr district today. Three American owned Woolworth stores, at Essen, Oberhausen and Sterkrade, and all Jewish owned department and chain stores in those cities were ordered closed by Nazi storm troops officials. Nazi pickets were placed at the stores bearing signs reading: "Germans, buy German goods." The pickets prevented the public from entering the stores.

The Woolworth stores had tried to avoid being branded as foreign by displaying signs that "90 per cent of all goods sold here are German." Two of the stores were later reopened.

Officials Support Action.

Hitlerite officials here praised the action of the storm troopers.

"The Hitlerite population evidently is determined no longer to tolerate Jewish business houses," they said, "and therefore demanded that they be closed. In districts where such a movement is under way storm troppers are to be thanked for serving law and enforcing quiet during the pad locking."

Germany's political death toll was increased by five today, bringing the number of persons slain since Hitler became chancellor to a little more than two months ago to at least 100. The bloodshed occurred today in four cities—Breslau, Dusseldorf, Wuppertal and Dinsburg. Three Nazis, a communist and a Republican were killed.

"Deplore" Attacks on Yankees.

The government today issued a statement "deploring" the incidents in which three American citizens, two of them Jews, were attacked recently by men wearing storm troop uniforms. The government assured American diplomats that the police would do everything in its power to prevent a repetition of similar incidents. The authorities said the attacks probably were carried out by communists wearing Nazi uniforms.

Hitler continued to strengthen his control over the country today. Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior, discharged all state police chiefs in Württemberg, Saxony, Baden, and Schaumburg-Lippe. He replaced them with Nazi commissioners. This leaves only Bavaria outside the control of a federal commissioner of police.

Hoist Imperial Colors.

Frederick Wilhelm, the former crown prince, helped storm troopers to hoist the imperial colors over his palace today, while in the palace of his ancestors at Potsdam the Nazi swastika flag was raised. Hitlerite and imperial flags were raised, despite protests, over many other buildings. Even the Berlin boerse, the reichsbank, and Berlin university received visits from storm troopers, who solemnly hoisted their flags. The boerse responded with a new rise in stocks.

At Coblenz, once the headquarters of the A. E. F., the mayor refused to fly the Hitlerite colors over the town hall. Four storm troopers took him to an open balcony, where he listened for 45 minutes to accusations hurled at him by a Nazi lieutenant in front of 10,000 Nazis.

The Karl Liebknecht house, former headquarters of the communist party, was seized by police today and will be used by the department against bolshevism, a newly created section of the Berlin political police. Police also occupied the building of the German labor unions today.

Civil War Threatens Austria.

VIENNA, March 8.—(AP)—A threat of civil war was flung into the Austrian situation tonight by the Social Democratic party, which issued an appeal to all workers and Republicans warning them to prepare to defend the constitution against a "toboggan into Fascism and into complete outlawry along with our brothers in Germany."

Chancellor Dollfuss today exercised the dictatorial powers given him yesterday by President Miklas by issuing decrees forbidding assemblages and limiting the freedom of the press.

Although Alfred Frauenfeld, leader of the Austrian Nazis, said his party was gratified at the dictatorship, he asserted it was ridiculous to expect that the decrees would result in suppression of the Nazi movement. The Nazis have been clamoring for a union with Germany and Frauenfeld threatened to seek power by force unless elections were permitted.

BODY OF MAYOR TO LIE IN STATE IN CITY HALL

Thousands in Night Tribute at Home.

Funeral Program

TODAY.

8:30 a. m.—Guard of honor assembles at Cermak home to escort the mayor's body to the city hall.

9:30 a. m.—Escort will proceed north in Millard avenue to Ogden avenue, thence to Washington boulevard and La Salle street.

10 a. m.—Body to lie in state at juncture of the two corridors in city hall and county building. Citizens will pass through corridor extending from Washington to Randolph street to view body.

TOMORROW.

9 a. m.—Funeral procession assembles.

10 a. m.—Procession will leave city hall, proceeding north to Randolph street, west to Canal street, south to Washington boulevard, and west to the Chicago Stadium.

Noon—Civic rites at the Stadium followed by burial services at the Bohemian National cemetery.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Three days of mourning and pageantry for Anton J. Cermak, Chicago's slain mayor, began yesterday morning at 10 o'clock with the arrival of the mayor's body from Miami.

All through the afternoon and evening and far into this morning there was a steady stream of men and women passing through the living room in the Cermak home at 2348 South Millard avenue, the callers gazing for the last time upon the features of the slain mayor.

Throngs Pass at Midnight.

At midnight the line of those waiting for admittance was still four blocks long. Estimates placed those who passed at from 40,000 to 50,000 persons.

Today those thousands who bared their heads to the chill winds yesterday as the victim of the assassin Zangara was carried through the city in a black and gray limousine to the old home will have another opportunity to look upon the still face in the bronze casket.

The body will lie in state in the central hall of the city and county building from 10 o'clock this morning until tomorrow. All who wish may pass through in line, which will form at the Washington street entrance.

25,000 to Attend Rites.

Tomorrow he will be buried after a great parade to the Chicago Stadium on West Madison street and the civic rites which will be held there at noon in the presence of 25,000, including national, state and city officials. Not since Carter H. Harrison the elder, likewise the victim of an assassin's bullet, was carried this way in 1893 has Chicago witnessed a spectacle of this kind. And before that the only similar occasion was a rainy day in May, 1865, when the body of Abraham Lincoln arrived in Chicago at the Illinois Central terminal and was carried behind six black horses to lie in the courthouse for a day before removal to the tomb at Springfield.

Just before being taken to the courthouse Lincoln's body was carried to an open air dais beneath a magnificent funeral arch standing across the foot of Park place, one block north of what is now Roosevelt road and a little to the east of Michigan avenue. Here thousands paid homage in the brief pause preceding the march to the courthouse.

One hundred thousand turned out in ankle deep mud to watch the passage of the martyred President. The reporter of THE TRIBUNE of that day wrote that the emotion of the crowd was so great that women fainted as the muffled drums approached.

Veterans Form Guard.

Chicago yesterday was calm, silent, grave as the shining long automobile hearse swept by on clean pavements, guarded by a little group of combat medal men in khaki and long lines of police, who kept the way clear of all traffic. The crowds were not overwhelming at any point.

TRIBUNE WANT AD BRINGS OUT $8,500, ALL IN $10 BILLS

Three items on the course of the depression, gathered by the want ad department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in the ordinary course of business, follow:

No. 1—W. Leuhring, real estate broker, advertised a small farm for sale in the neighborhood of Itasca in Du Page county. A buyer paid $8,500, all in $10 bills, out of his pocket.

"I didn't know there were that many $10 bills in the world," said Mr. Leuhring.

No. 2—Walter Swanson, 1038 West 59th street, advertised a 15 acre farm for rent. He received 120 replies and 90 persons called to do business at once.

"Thirty had the rent money in their pockets," asserted Mr. Swanson. "I rented my place and the influx of renters into the neighborhood resulted in several other places being leased."

No. 3—Dr. Bernard Koffman, chiropodist, 55 East Washington street, inserted an advertisement in the personal columns announcing that all fees due him for services in the last seven years are canceled.

"Just helping to restore normal business conditions," he explained.

CHICAGO LASHED BY GALE; TODAY WILL BE COLDER

A west wind that reached a velocity of 65 miles an hour in intermittent gusts yesterday afternoon gave pedestrians trouble in getting about in the streets. The highest official velocity recorded at the government weather bureau was 32 miles an hour, but THE TRIBUNE'S anemograph showed gusts of 65 miles an hour in the afternoon.

Pedestrians who had been buffeted by the gale crowded the lobby of THE TRIBUNE Tower in the afternoon to learn the wind velocity recorded by the anemograph.

Weather Forecaster W. P. Day predicted considerably colder weather today. He said that the temperature would reach a low of 22 degrees early this morning and would climb no higher than 25 degrees throughout the day.

Fair's Fire Department Makes Good in First Job

The World's Fair fire department had its first workout yesterday when it put out a blaze in a shanty near the north entrance of the hall of science on the Century of Progress grounds before city fire apparatus reached the scene.

The President Writes Book on Economics

New York, March 8.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt will again declare himself for "sound money" in his book, "Looking Forward," which the John Day company will publish March 16. He will say also that "the day of the great promoter or financial titan, to whom we granted everything if only he would build or develop, is over."

He will say that he does not now favor our participation as a member in the league of nations, and that "there is excuse but no necessity for the vast army of useless officials we are carrying on our backs."

Outlines His Creed.

"In outlining my economic creed," he has written, "it is necessary to make clear again my point of view with regard to the individual. I believe that our industrial and economic system is made for individual men and women, and not individual men and women for the benefit of the system.

"I believe that the individual should have full liberty of action to make the most of himself; but I do not believe that in the name of the sacred word, individualism, a few powerful interests should be permitted to make industrial cannon fodder of the lives of half the population of the United States.

"I believe in the sacredness of private property, which means that I do not believe that it should be subjected to the ruthless manipulation of professional gamblers in the stock market and in the corporate system.

Against "Regimentation."

"I share the common complaint against regimentation; I dislike it not only when it is carried out by an informal group amounting to an economic government of the United States, but also when it is done by the government of the United States itself.

"I believe that the government, without becoming a prying bureaucracy, can act as a check or counterbalance of this oligarchy so as to secure initiative, life, a chance to work, and the safety of savings to men and women, rather than safety of exploitation to the exploiter, safety of manipulation to the financial manipulator, safety of unlicensed power to those who would speculate to the bitter end with the welfare and property of other people.

"We must get back to first principles; we must make American individualism what it was intended to be—equality of opportunity for all, the right of exploitation for none."

He will also declare that the "official policy" of the Hoover administration in dealing with the depression was an "excuse." This "excuse," was, he says: "The depression has been deepened by events from abroad which are beyond the control of either our citizens or our government."

"But the records of the civilized nations of the world," President Roosevelt has written, "prove two facts: First, that the economic structure of other nations was affected by our own tide of speculation and the curtailment of our lending helped bring on their distress; second, that the bubble burst first in the land of its origin—the United States. The major collapse abroad followed. It was not simultaneous with ours.

"Moreover, further curtailment of our loans, plus the continual stagnation caused by the high tariff, continued the depression throughout international commerce."

Jesse I. Strauss Mentioned as Ambassador to France

Washington, D. C., March 8.—[Special.]—It was reported, but not confirmed today, that Jesse Isadore Strauss, wealthy New York department store executive, had been selected by President Roosevelt as ambassador to France. Some time ago Mr. Strauss was mentioned as a probable selection for the post of ambassador to Cuba. Mr. Strauss financed some of the activities in the Roosevelt campaign.

Billions of Money Based on Liquid Assets.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 8.—(Special.)—President Roosevelt announced at midnight the completion of a program for immediate reopening of the banks of the country.

The program, which will be carried into effect through legislation to be passed by congress when it meets in extraordinary session tomorrow, embraces the following outstanding features:

1. Issuance of billions of dollars of currency based not on gold but on the "liquid assets" of the banks.

2. Continued suspension of gold payments and embargo on exports of gold.

3. Clothing of the President with the powers of a financial dictator.

4. Continuation of the national banking holiday, wholly or in part, pending complete reopening of the banks.

5. Legalization of the bank holiday proclamation of March 5 and all measures adopted by the treasury to carry it into effect.

The enabling legislation consists of a lengthy and complicated bill dealing chiefly with the provisions for a vast currency expansion which was prepared by the President's economic advisers and submitted to the house and senate leaders of both parties by Mr. Roosevelt at a White House conference lasting till nearly midnight.

Roosevelt's Statement.

After the congressional leaders had departed the President issued the following statement:

"I have been in conference with members of the senate and the house and have talked over with them a measure which has been carefully studied and prepared and which will immediately relieve the situation and at once start banking operations throughout the entire country.

"I have been assured that there is every prospect of the immediate passage of this legislation on its introduction.

"I am gratified at the outlook."

May Reopen Friday.

When the banks will reopen will depend largely upon the dispatch with which congress passes the legislation asked by the President and the expedition with which the new supply of currency can be furnished the banks. Upon the assumption that the legislation will be passed by tomorrow night, treasury officials said that many banks would be able to reopen on Friday.

In order to obtain the new currency banks will furnish to the federal reserve banks as collateral liquid assets of a character which are not recognized by existing law as eligible to discount.

Works on Message.

Following the conference the President began preparation of his message to congress which will be transmitted in writing shortly after the extraordinary session is called to order at noon

Bankers Here Await Rules for Reopening

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Chicago banks last night awaited final instructions from Washington before announcing their plans for tomorrow. The national moratorium ends at midnight tonight and bankers here in touch with capital developments believe that the holiday with its present drastic restrictions will not be extended.

Regulations governing reopening of banks are expected from Washington today.

Notified that the administration had decided upon a plan of currency expansion and had frowned upon the putting out of scrip by local banking groups, clearing house officials abandoned their certificate scheme to await further information. The certificates had been prepared by the Chicago banks and are now stacked in the vaults of the old State Bank building, La Salle and Monroe streets. Bankers were certain last night that none of the scrip will be used.

Banks Closed to Public.

Banks were still closed to the public yesterday. Employes were on the job, but the only business transacted was the furnishing of credit for the shipment of perishable foods.

Heads of the downtown banks said last night that they would not expand their operations today. No change in the local situation was looked for until after the convening of the new congress today.

James R. Leavell, president of the Continental Illinois bank, returned yesterday from Washington, where he had been participating in conferences between political and financial leaders. He declined, however, to make any statement concerning plans for the resumption of business.

Wary in Discussing Situation.

The rapidly changing picture in Washington made bankers here wary in discussing the situation. They pointed out that numerous pathways to a solution had been explored by the leaders in Washington only to find that they were in blind alleys. Then the Roosevelt plan was announced.

Partial deposit guarantee plans, local and national scrip schemes and a half dozen other proffered solutions were considered and then discarded. What tomorrow. The message, the President indicated, will be brief.

Anti-hoarding legislation also will be considered at the session beginning tomorrow. Measures for reaching and punishing the hoarders of currency whose withdrawal of deposits precipitated the panic and forced the closing of the banks were discussed at the White House conference.

"I can say that we will have legislation getting after those fellows," said one of the house leaders as he left the White House.

Act Against Hoarders.

As a move preparatory to anti-hoarding legislation the administration moved tonight to publish the names of all hoarders who do not redeposit their hoardings within the next five days.

The federal reserve board at the instance of the President dispatched wires late tonight to all Federal Reserve banks, ordering them to furnish a list of persons who have withdrawn gold since Feb. 1.

The order went to each of the twelve Federal Reserve banks, which in turn will transmit it to all member banks of the system. The lists are returnable on March 13 and will include, it is understood, only the names of persons who have failed by that time to redeposit their gold withdrawals.

According to an official of a large Washington bank a United States senator endeavored last week to obtain through the bank a large amount of gold. His request was refused.

Called Reserve Bank Notes.

Because the new currency will not be backed by gold it will be called federal reserve bank notes to distinguish it from federal reserve notes which are backed by gold.

Treasury officials have been checking up on the volume of "liquid assets" of banks that will be available as a base for the new currency. One estimate is that the available collateral will permit a total issue of 25 billion dollars of the new notes.

To what extent if any, inflation of the currency will be produced by this proposed increase in the volume of money is one of the big questions involved in the Roosevelt plan.

That inflation will be the consequence is a conclusion widely reached in financial and commercial circles, with the result that a leap upward of commodity and security prices is looked for the moment the exchanges reopen.

How Bill Is Framed.

The bill which the President will ask congress to pass before midnight tomorrow consists of three sections. The first section ratifies the President's banking holiday proclamation and all that has been done thereunder.

This is necessary for the reason that the government lawyers doubt the authority of the enemy trading act under which Mr. Roosevelt suspended gold payments, embargoed gold exports, and declared the banking holiday.

The act is held to have expired by limitation and in any event to be inapplicable to domestic control of gold.

The second section grants the President sweeping powers to continue to deal with the banking crisis.

Widens Basis of Credit.

The third section provides for the new currency. It liberalizes the provisions of the Glass-Steagall act by allowing banks to issue notes with no gold reserve behind them. The notes thus issued would be backed only by United States bonds in the same manner as national bank notes issued by national banks. It further liberalizes section 10a of the federal reserve act as amended by the Glass-Steagall act so as to enable banks to obtain currency on "liquid assets" of a character not now eligible.

One of the effects of the legislation, it was explained, will be to produce a unified banking system. Only member banks of the federal reserve system will be able to avail themselves of the privileges afforded by this legislation to convert assets now ineligible into currency. State banks will be compelled to join the federal system in order to obtain the funds that will enable them to reopen.

Another foreseen effect is the weeding out of weak banks. Institutions unable to furnish liquid assets for currency will be unable to reopen. Others will be able to remain open to the extent of their liquidity pending at least a recovery of general public confidence in banks.

Receives Radical Leaders.

At 9 o'clock President Roosevelt received Senators Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, George W. Norris of Nebraska, both of whom, though elected as Republicans, supported Mr. Roosevelt, and Edward P. Costigan of Colorado, radical Democrat. To them the President explained his program and obtained their approval of it.

These three senators had departed by 9:30, when the participants in the conference of leaders began to arrive. They were Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin, Attorney General Homer Cummings, Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the senate finance committee; Vice President John N. Garner, Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the senate; Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], Senator Clarence Dill [Rad. Dem., Wash.], Senator Hiram Johnson [Rad., Cal.], Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], who will be speaker of the house; Representative Joseph W. Byrnes of Tennessee, who will be Democratic leader of the house; Representative Henry B. Steagall [Dem., Ala.], who will be chairman of the house committee on banking and currency; Representative Clifton A. Woodrum [Dem., Va.], Representative John McDuffie Dem., Ala.], Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York, who will be Republican leader of the house, and Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, who will be Republican leader of the senate.

Stresses Critical Condition.

The President, it is related, did much of the talking in the conference, dilating upon the critical state of the country and the necessity of heroic action to avert complete economic collapse. There was a good deal of argument over the provisions of the legislation for a vast currency expansion which were so complicated that few of the leaders outside of Senator Glass, banking authority, were able to understand them.

Mr. Glass, after going over the bill carefully, gave it his approval in the main. He said there were some details, however, which he would endeavor to have changed in the senate.

When the conferees emerged from the White House shortly before midnight Senator Robinson read the following statement on behalf of himself and Mr. Rainey:

"We have gone over a tentative draft of the bill and considered it with some care. It is the opinion of all in the conference that the bill will be passed through both houses tomorrow and that it will result in the opening of a large number of the banks on Friday. As the draft is not yet complete we are not at liberty to announce the details of the measure, but they will be available by noon Thursday."

Snell Gives Views.

Representative Snell indicated that the members of his party would cooperate to give the measure swift passage.

"The situation is so terrible at the present time," he said, "that we must open the banks and accept the recommendations of the administration and pass the bill without delay. If corrections are found necessary we can make them later."

Mr. Roosevelt's reasons for asking the power of a financial dictator are understood to be that the situation is changing so rapidly that broad powers are essential to meeting unforeseen developments.

The President told the leaders he hoped the necessary legislation would be passed before the houses adjourned tomorrow, in which event he will issue a proclamation tomorrow night continuing the banking holiday with provisions for speedy reopening of the banks.

Democrats Promise Passage.

The Democratic leaders assured the President that with the overwhelming Democratic majorities in both houses the legislation will be passed before adjournment tomorrow.

Because of the lack of time for mature preparation of a program of permanent legislation reforming banking practices and reorganizing the banking system the President will ask congress to take a recess of two or three weeks after passing the bills dealing with the panic.

Then when congress reassembles he will be ready to submit not only his bank reform program but his entire program for balancing the budget, reorganizing and reducing the cost of government, and alleviating the depression. It is possible that in his message, however, the President will disclose some of his ideas regarding permanent banking reform, such as the divorce of affiliates from banks and the establishment of a uniform and more responsible banking system.

Program Handed Bankers.

The Roosevelt program, including the scheme for provision of an increased volume of currency devised by the President's economic advisers, was handed this forenoon to the group of leading bankers from New York, Chicago, and other financial centers who have been conferring at the treasury on the crisis since Sunday morning. In laying the program before the bankers Secretary of the Treasury Woodin explained that this is what the President had decided to ask congress to give him authority to carry into effect.

The bankers were not asked for their opinion of the plan. Some of them evinced considerable indignation, giving vent to the view that they had been invited to Washington merely to furnish window dressing for a plan that was being worked out.

The recalcitrants talked of leading an insurrection against the program, but nothing came of it. Others of the banking group on being informed that such were the President's wishes merely commented that they would be "good soldiers" and started for their trains.

Define Liquid Assets.

Financial authorities define liquid assets as any "asset held in cash or readily convertible into cash." Wide discretion may be exercised in deciding what assets are actually under present conditions "readily convertible into cash." In this zone of discretion the magic of the new plan seems to be hidden.

In concrete terms predictions are hazarded that liquid assets will broaden the category of paper eligible for federal reserve note backing to include certain state and municipal security issues and commercial paper of somewhat longer maturity.

DAY IN WASHINGTON

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Officials worked on plans for additional currency as President Roosevelt drafted message asking congress power to continue command of banks and called congressional leaders to White House.

Senate and house leaders rushed organization plans to expedite cooperation on President's emergency program at special session starting today.

Efforts to reopen grain exchanges before end of bank holiday were abandoned at conference called by Chairman Morgenthau of farm board and substitute plan was sought.

Secretary Wallace called farm leaders to Friday conference to consider new farm aid plan.

features of the numerous programs will be found in the Roosevelt plan they were unable to state. They shied from questions on the currency issue plan, but made it plain that they were ready to support the administration. And above all they were emphatic in stating that local action hinges on instructions from Washington.

No scrip will be put out here either today or tomorrow even if the administration at Washington should change its mind and authorize its issuance, according to the opinion expressed by one clearing house official.

Keeps Wire Open.

Up to a late hour last night no instructions for the banks were received in connection with the expiration of the national moratorium.

A number of downstate banks were reported cashing pay roll checks, in accordance with federal reserve ruling, but Chicago banks were not exercising this privilege. Meanwhile financial and commodity markets remained closed again yesterday except the live stock market.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE HIT BY UNTERMYER

Los Angeles, Cal., March 8.—(AP)—The New York Stock Exchange was described today as the most "powerful and despotic institution on earth," by an ancient adversary—Samuel Untermyer, New York corporation lawyer.

Speaking before the law alumni of the University of Southern California he expressed conviction that the impending special session of congress will do what he sought to do as early as 1912—put stock exchanges under government regulation and make them answerable to the courts of law.

He recommended that the senate banking committee of the coming session broaden the recent banking inquiry to include a thorough investigation of stock exchange activities, the banking phase to be suspended temporarily.

Mr. Untermyer predicted that stock exchange members who "are opposing all regulation will yet bless the day when their lawless license is curtailed, as do the bankers today for the existence of the federal reserve act, which they one and all short sightedly predicted would bring ruin upon the country."

Stranded N. Y. Travelers Start for Home by Bus

Ten New Yorkers, stranded in Chicago by the bank holiday, were started east yesterday on a bus chartered by H. H. Wilhite, credit manager of the Palmer house, where the ten persons were staying. The Great Eastern Bus lines agreed to take the visitors, three of whom were women, back to New York at a cost of $14 each.

Taxi Business Drops Off 25 Per Cent.

Local transportation lines, including the street car, elevated, motor bus, and taxicab companies, reported yesterday that each day of the bank holiday has caused a greater falling off of business. Operators of gasoline filling station chains, however, said that their business had not decreased to the extent expected.

On Monday, the first full day of the moratorium, business of the surface lines was 7 per cent lower than on Monday of last week. Tuesday's business was 8 per cent lower than the week before, and yesterday the drop was 10 per cent. Figured on the same basis the elevated line decrease on Monday was 6 per cent; on Tuesday, 10 per cent, and yesterday, 12 per cent.

Taxi Decrease Is 25 Per Cent.

The larger taxicab companies said business had decreased about 25 per cent from the previous week. Traffic volume of the motor coach company was off about 10 per cent this week.

It was the opinion of surface and elevated lines officials that an increasingly large number of persons not forced by business to use these forms of transportation were remaining at home until the banking restrictions are lifted.

Taxicab company officials expressed the view that dozens of persons who ordinarily would use this means of transportation would not return to it until the bank holiday ends. The decrease in taxi business, they said, was traced almost entirely to the short haul trade.

Oil Company Optimistic.

One large oil company, although reporting a 10 per cent drop in business within the last few days, expressed an optimistic view of the situation.

"It has been our experience recently in other states where bank holidays have been in effect," said an official of this concern, "that, although business dropped off during the first few days, there was a pickup noticeable within a week, with business reaching normal a day or so before or coincident with the reopening of banks."

GREEN OFFERS PROGRAM FOR AIDING TRADE

New York, March 8.—[Special.]—A three point program for economic recovery was presented today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the New York State Board of Trade.

The restoration of buying power through the establishment of higher wage standards; the five day week and the six hour day, as measures to create more extensive employment, and the creation of more elastic credit facilities, to encourage production and create work, are the policies he advocated.

"These economic measures can be quickly and voluntarily applied," he declared, and he urged that they be supplemented by three principal legislative remedies, which he outlined as follows:

"A modification of restrictive anti-trust legislation, containing protective provisions for safeguarding the public against exploitation and embodying in it the declared public policy of the United States toward labor, labor organizations, and industry. Child labor legislation which would eliminate the employment of children and serve to protect child life.

"A revision of the banking laws and of the federal reserve act, so as to provide a greater regree of safety to depositors. A flexible currency plan which would adequately meet business and industrial needs and constructive governmental control of credit facilities so as to prevent, so far as possible, an orgy of speculation such as occurred in 1929."

HORNER CALLS ON ILLINOIS TO BACK ROOSEVELT

Appeals to Patriotism of People in Crisis.

Gov. Horner issued the following proclamation yesterday:

"The emergency of the present is a challenge to our faith in orderly government and our loyalty and devotion to and our confidence in its established institutions and functions.

"As in the time of war, when an enemy threatens our security, the situation demands of each and every one of us to the fullest measure of coöperation with our President in his stupendous task of restoring our economic balance, our happiness and prosperity. The need of the hour calls for national unity in support of our President, a unity even more complete and unselfish than that necessary in war.

"Our President has responsibilities as grave as have ever faced a great leader in our history. His is the task of reëstablishing our national faith in our ability to go forward. The people must share with him this great responsibility.

"I am convinced that there is throughout the nation a spontaneous spiritual feeling of confidence and hope in our chosen leader. The nature of our national crisis calls for an expression of this confidence in the combined voice of the people to show that they are unitedly behind him. As loyal citizens each of us should subordinate all thought of self, of sectional interest and partisan politics to the common good of all, and unite behind the President, to enable him to guide our nation quickly forward to better days. This responsibility is inescapable.

"Now, therefore, I, Henry Horner, governor of the state of Illinois, do hereby urge the citizens of Illinois to discharge the responsibility imposed upon them by the rights of citizenship, to join with me in the support, wholeheartedly and unitedly, of the President, in his efforts to protect our nation from the serious consequences of further economic disturbance, and to join with me in this expression of full faith and confidence in his leadership, and in fervent prayer to God to protect and sustain him. And I also urge that we appeal to the patriotism of congress to coöperate with the President in taking such action as will guarantee economic stability, relief from unemployment and the restoration of confidence."

FATHER OF "BUY BRITISH" DRIVE WOULD CALL HALT

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, March 8.—"Buy British," the campaign that was expected to bring about a revival of British manufacturing by turning purchasers away from foreign goods to home products, is now doubted by one of its originators.

Sir Edward Crowe, controller of the department of overseas trade, said: "I think probably the 'Buy British' campaign has gone far enough. We want to buy American goods and we want America to buy British goods." His remarks were made to a gathering of American and British business men.

Sir Edward confessed he had been an originator of the movement. It was set on foot by the empire marketing board, of which he is a member.

LIFE INSURANCE FIRMS SUSPEND POLICY LOANS

New York Companies Will Extend Due Dates.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 8.—[Special.]—Extension of loans upon policies has been suspended by all life insurance companies in New York state, although the companies have decided upon a degree of liberality in dealing with requests for extension of the period of grace for payment of premiums, it was stated yesterday at the offices of the superintendent of insurance. At the same time, it was denied that any company had suspended death claims.

Suspension of policy loan grants has been made temporarily because of the national banking moratorium and as a protective measure by the insurance companies. These grants had been continued on Saturday and Monday of the present holiday, but the requests for them after these days accelerated so greatly that it was necessary to call a halt. Usually the New York insurance companies promptly pay by check such loans at their own treasurers' offices.

Make Premiums Easier.

It was stated that executives of the insurance companies had voluntarily adopted a policy of dealing liberally with all policy holders who ask for an extension of the grace period for payment of premiums. However, this grace period has not been formally extended to any arbitrary number of days for all policy holders. Instead, it will be adjusted to fit the individual case, it was said.

The privilege of surrendering policies and collecting their cash value has also been suspended by the New York companies. These cash surrender values, definitely stated in policies, are usually equal to the loan value of a policy.

May Affect Dividends.

The superintendent of insurance has also given the insurance companies the right to discontinue paying policy holders, at their demand, any dividend accumulations to which they are ordinarily entitled. In some cases policyholders have built up a substantial reserve for their policies by allowing dividends to accumulate in the company's possession for a long period of years.

Under the agreement reached by insurance executives persons who are entitled to monthly payments under accident and sick policies will be in no way affected by the bank holiday, it was stated, as these payments will be made regularly.

NEW YORK LIFE ADDS ANGELL IN COOLIDGE PLACE

New York, March 8.—[Special.]—Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of Yale university, was elected today to succeed the late Calvin Coolidge on the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance company. This was announced by Thomas A. Buckner, the president of the company, at the close of a meeting of the directors.

Mr. Coolidge served as a director from May 8, 1929, until his death on Jan. 5, 1933.

Commenting on his election Dr. Angell said:

"Life insurance in its best form is one of the great triumphs of modern civilization, a protection at once to society and to the individual. I count it a high honor to be chosen to succeed Calvin Coolidge, whose rugged and uncompromising devotion to the obligations of public trust was so conspicuous a feature of his distinguished career."

Warn Merchants to Watch for Counterfeit Money

Chicago merchants were warned yesterday to watch for counterfeit $10 and $20 bills of the new size and $100 bills of the old large size by Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan of the secret service. The statement said several fraudulent bills of these denominations have appeared in Chicago. Capt. Callaghan requested merchants to bring suspected bills to the secret service office on the fifth floor of the federal building for examination.

INSURANCE FUNDS ARE PROTECTED BY NEW LAW IN IOWA

Des Moines, Ia., March 8.—(AP)—The new Iowa insurance law, enacted today, and which is effective tomorrow, gives the state insurance commissioner virtually dictatorial powers. It provides the following:

1. Empowers the insurance commissioner, with the governor's approval, to make such changes in existing insurance rules respecting payment of premiums and payment or withdrawal of funds as are deemed necessary.

2. Gives the insurance commissioner "full control and supervision" of the assets of all insurance companies, associations, and fraternal benefit societies transacting business in Iowa.

3. No action at law or in equity shall be brought or maintained in any court in Iowa or elsewhere against an insurance firm asking relief contrary to a rule or regulation of the insurance commissioner.

4. Revocation of its certificate of authority to transact business in Iowa shall be the penalty for violation of the act.

5. The act shall continue until the governor shall by proclamation declare the existing emergency at an end or until March 1, 1936.

FARM BUREAUS URGE ROOSEVELT TO AID PROGRAM

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, last night wired President Roosevelt, at the close of an all day session of the federation's board of directors, urging the immediate action of the administration on problems which the federation deems imperative to national economic recovery.

The federation's directors voted to support O'Neal's program, asking that President Roosevelt include it in his recommendations to the special session of congress. Of most importance, they decided, is a governmental guarantee of all new bank deposits, the protection of depositors to include rural banking as fully as for large city banking interests.

The revaluation of the dollar as determined by Dr. G. F. Warren of Cornell university, which would reduce the amount of gold behind each dollar and fix a changing value for money, sensitive to changes in commodity prices, was also urged. Restoration of price parity for agricultural products with those of industry and relief for distressed mortgage indebtedness also were asked.

HORNER CONFERS ON INSURANCE ACTION BY STATE

Gov. Horner and Ernest Palmer, state superintendent of insurance, met late last night at the Congress hotel to discuss the insurance situation in Illinois following the action taken yesterday by life insurance companies of New York in suspending the granting of loans on policies.

Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, with the meeting still going on, Mr. Palmer said that no action would be taken this morning and that a statement would be issued on the matter during the day.

Lawyers familiar with insurance law pointed out that the state cannot legally impose an insurance moratorium, such an act being in violation of the constitution protecting the validity of contracts.

Bailiff Halts Evictions During Bank Holiday

Bailiff Albert J. Horan of the Municipal court yesterday ordered a moratorium on all garnishments, evictions and replevins by his office until the end of the banking holiday. He is also endeavoring to stop levies on personal property to satisfy judgments for the same period. Filing of civil cases in the court has dropped from a normal average of 700 a day to about 250, principally because the demand for cash payment of filing fees has not been relaxed, Clerk Joseph L. Gill said.

Scrip in Nebraska City Changes Hands 18 Times

Fremont, Neb., March 8.—(AP)—Scrip worth $200 was circulating today for the first time in the 76 years of the city's history. Note number 1 for $1, similar to 199 others issued today, changed hands 18 times during the day, each time collecting one of 36 three cent stamps it must carry before redemption for a one dollar bill in currency. The notes paid 74 men for clearing snow from city streets.

PROTEST HIGHER PORK PRICES BY REFUSING TO BUY

Charge of Profiteering Is Made by Housewives.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Chicago meat retailers and housewives yesterday answered the announcement of packers that fresh pork prices were higher this week because of sudden economic changes by suddenly withdrawing buying. They also protested verbally against the high pork prices. Purchasing of other foodstuffs continued active yesterday in both chain and independent food stores, with prices substantially unchanged from those of a week ago.

The boosting of pork prices this week in Chicago was followed yesterday with a slightly lowered price level in Packingtown. Pork loins, which rose from 8½ cents to as high as 20 cents a pound wholesale, were reduced to 16 and 17 cents yesterday but found few buyers.

Calls Price Rise Unjustified.

"The sudden rise in prices was entirely unjustified," declared Charles W. Kaiser, secretary of the Chicago Retail Meat Dealers' association. "Retailers and consumers are convinced that those holding the supplies are taking advantage of a situation. We want it understood that the retail end of the industry was not a party to any such attempts to hold up the public in a time of distress."

Housewives representing fifteen communities of the metropoliton area were called to a meeting at the Women's City club yesterday to protest against what they charged was "profiteering" in the boosting of meat prices. They previously had made a survey of food prices in each locality and reported their findings to Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, chairman of the club's foods and markets committee.

"We find that pork prices are about the only ones that have increased since the bank moratorium went into effect," Mrs. Fribley said. "We find that a doubling and trebling in these prices in three days cannot be justified by any changes in supply and demand or in the money situation.

"Amounts to Profiteering."

"Our committee is convinced that the sudden rise was deliberate and amounts to profiteering. We believe housewives will turn to other foods and that meat consumption for some time will be adversely affected."

Reports yesterday that some food distributors were contemplating the repricing of their stocks were discredited by wholesale and retail food authorities. Although shipments of butter have decreased the wholesale prices advanced only ½ to 1½ cents a pound in the four days. Liberal supplies of eggs, poultry, fruits, and vegetables and staple foodstuffs have also served to keep down prices.

Most branches of the food business yesterday were found to be expecting no material price increases for at least a week or ten days. Charles Irrgang of the Chicago fruit auction said a national organization of wholesale market committees was functioning effectively in making this possible. He added that the liberalizing of bank credits for shippers of perishable foods has insured the continuation of this policy "at least until the ironing out of the financial situation."

MRS. C. R. LEIDY, SOCIETY LEADER, DIES IN ACCIDENT

Car Plunges from Bridge Into River.

New York, March 8.—[Special.]—Mrs. Marjorie E. Woodhouse Leidy of Philadelphia and Rye, N. Y., was drowned and her husband, Carter Randolph Leidy, was injured today when their automobile plunged forty feet from an embankment into the Bronx river, where the stream passes under the Gun Hill road bridge.

Mr. Leidy was at the wheel and his wife was in the rear seat of their convertible coupe. He was driving on Gun Hill road when another automobile cut across his path. In a quick effort to avoid a collision Mr. Leidy swerved his car in the same direction, but it slid on the wet pavement and crashed through a wooden railing on top of the stone wall that shoulders a steep grade.

Auto Falls Into Water.

The automobile toppled over and sank into the muddy bottom of the river. At this point the water is 6 feet deep and 20 feet wide. The car sank to the top of the doors, making escape difficult.

When rescuers arrived Mr. Leidy had managed to extricate himself through an open window and, dazed and bleeding, was clinging to the rear of the automobile.

"Never mind me, get my wife," he cried as five civilians and a policeman waded toward him.

The rescuers carried Mr. Leidy out and he was taken to a hospital. It is believed he has a fractured skull.

While a crowd of about 200 looked on a policeman dived into the water. He took Mrs. Leidy out of the car where she had been trapped.

Leidy Describes Accident.

At the hospital Mr. Leidy told Assistant District Attorney Edward F. Breslin that he was confused by rain and fog, and when the car appeared in front of him he swerved quickly. The car skidded, Mr. Leidy said, and the next sensation he had was of crashing through something and plunging through the air.

Mr. Leidy, who was not told of his wife's death, was visited at the hospital by William C. Dickerman, his uncle, president of the American Locomotive company. Dickerman succeeded Secretary of the Treasury Woodin as a member of the executive committee of the American Car and Foundry company.

Mrs. Leidy, the former Mrs. Marjorie Woodhouse Procter, was married to Carter Randolph Leidy in Baltimore on Oct. 24, 1927.

Mrs. Leidy's first husband was Frederic William Procter, one of the heirs of the Procter & Gamble soap fortune. She divorced him in Paris in 1927, receiving the custody of their two children, Patricia and Frederic W. Procter Jr.

Mr. Leidy attracted much attention in 1920 when as a freshman of 19 in the University of Pennsylvania he eloped to Knoxville, Tenn., and married Miss Josephine [Fifi] Widener, daughter of Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia traction magnate, sportsman, and art patron. She was 17 at the time. She obtained a divorce in 1926.

HOLD UP LYING-IN HOSPITAL; STEAL PATIENTS' $5,000

Four men held up the Chicago Lying-In hospital, 5841 Maryland avenue, yesterday and escaped with $1,500 belonging to the hospital and cash and valuables of patients estimated at $5,000.

The gang walked through a reception room in which some fifty visitors were waiting and completed the robbery without attracting the attention of the visitors or employés.

The loot was taken from a vault off the office of George Swanson, the hospital cashier, who was held up. The hospital funds had been accumulating since the bank holiday started. The robbers left the office one at a time.

SENTENCED TO YEAR FOR THEFT OF CLIENT'S CASH

Paul P. Baltutis, who operated a real estate office and steamship agency at 3327 South Halsted street, was sentenced to one to ten years in the penitentiary yesterday by Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court on a charge of embezzlement.

Baltutis, who pleaded guilty, was arrested on complaints that he had pocketed $77 given him by clients to be sent to Europe.

Robbers After a Big Haul, Return Victim's Measly $5

Two armed men last night halted Louis A. Donn, 6920 South Shore drive, at 74th street and Blackstone avenue. They told him they knew his name and ordered that he take them to a finance company at 7424 Stony Island avenue and open a safe for them. Donn convinced them that his brother, and not he, was manager of the finance company, and that he couldn't open the safe. This was true. The robbers let Donn keep $5 he had in his pockets and released him with the remark that they wanted a big haul or nothing.

NEW YORK BANKS LIMIT MONEY FOR PAY ROLLS

Issue of State Scrip Is Halted by Woodin.

New York, March 8.—With national and state banking holidays scheduled to end at the close of business tomorrow the New York commercial banks and trust companies prepared today to reopen Friday. Their activities will be as close to "normal" as Secretary of the Treasury Woodin will permit.

The New York Clearing House association anticipates that the banking moratorium will not be extended. It believes the national currency will be expanded and that strict rules for doing business will be imposed. The association therefore has formulated a plan for resuming banking facilities on a large scale.

Announcement of the clearing house plan is expected tomorrow after disclosure in Washington of the final details of the federal government's new banking program.

Soon to Resume Trading.

The New York Stock exchange announced that it would reopen as soon as "adequate" banking facilities were available. This is expected to be Friday or Saturday. Other security and commodity markets are expected to follow the big board's example.

Gov. Lehman today named Al Smith as presitent of the State Emergency Certificate corporation to issue scrip, but tonight word came from Washington that the secretary of the treasury had revoked authority for such issuance. That was taken to mean that a currency measure to avoid such state or clearing house action will be presented to congress tomorrow.

Commercial banks and trust companies will be open again tomorrow for limited banking facilities under Secretary Woodin's regulations permitting banks during the moratorium to supply funds for the movement of foodstuffs, meeting pay rolls, and cashing checks for absolutely necessary articles such as food and medicine; to make change, give access to safe deposit boxes and perform other specified functions.

Pay Out Millions.

Today the commercial banks and trust companies were open for the purposes mentioned, and it was estimated they put $10,000,000 into circulation. Different banks took advantage of Mr. Woodin's permission in different ways. Only one bank, as far as is known, supplied pay roll funds in full. Some banks paid 25 per cent of pay rolls, others advanced to employers only $5 for each man on their pay rolls. In most cases the banks supplied pay roll funds to employers only, but one bank at least advanced money on individual pay roll checks until the banks reopen on Friday.

Few banks permitted depositors to open new "trust fund" accounts in which money deposited since the moratorium began would be segregated and kept available for withdrawal on demand. Bankers explained that this would mean a great deal of extra bookkeeping that they are not equipped to handle immediately. Old depositors also complained against such segregation.

Reserve Bank Open.

The Federal Reserve bank of New York was open during regular banking hours, under Mr. Woodin's regulation permitting it to rediscount for banks here and supply them with currency under certain provisions.

It was reported that the Federal Reserve during the day took in several millions in gold and gold certificates. Armored trucks carried the gold and gold certificates to the Federal Reserve bank and carried other currency back to the banks.

Savings banks were open only to make change and permit access to safe deposit boxes. They will require 60 days' notice on withdrawal of funds.

BOARD PUSHES PLAN TO RAISE FUNDS FOR TEACHERS' BACK PAY

Plans for the payment of back salaries to 14,000 teachers and 4,000 other employés of the school system will be pushed to the utmost when the banking situation eases up, President Orville J. Taylor of the board of education announced yesterday.

Mr. Taylor said that he and other city officials probably will place their plea for funds before the Reconstruction Finance corporation in Washington within the next week or ten days.

The Washington hearing on the Dewey committee's application for a government loan to pay school employés was scheduled for Monday, but the banking holiday and the death of Mayor Cermak led to a postponement.

The committee, headed by Charles S. Dewey, has conducted a vigorous campaign in recent weeks to sell 1932 tax anticipation warrants to business houses and investors to pay up city and school employés to Jan. 1, 1933.

The amount of the loan which ultimately will be asked of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, it is said, will represent the difference between the receipts of the warrant sale and the total amount needed for the back pay rolls.

The loan would be made, according to plans, direct to a new trust concern in Chicago, which would put the tax warrants up as collateral.

RIDER CRUSHED TO DEATH WHEN TRUCKS COLLIDE

Joseph Simcich, 24 years old, 10004 Avenue M, was killed last evening when a truck rammed the rear of another upon which he was riding at 99th street and Ewing avenue. Neither driver was held.

This death and three others yesterday increased the 1933 automobile toll in Cook county to 150. The other victims:

John Esser, 60 years old, 316 East Oak street, Villa Park. Died at the Presbyterian hospital. He was struck by an automobile near his home last December.

Joseph Wirth, 73 years old, 907 North Francisco avenue. Died in the Norwegian-American hospital. He was struck by an automobile on March 4 at Augusta boulevard and Mozart street.

Unidentified man, about 55 years old. Died at the county hospital a few hours after he was struck by an automobile at 45th street and Cicero avenue.

CITY HOSPITALS UNAFFECTED BY BANK HOLIDAY

Chicago's 67 hospitals have been unaffected by the bank holiday and have not found it necessary to curtail care or service given to the sick, it was stated yesterday by Dr. Bert W. Caldwell, secretary of the American Hospital association.

"Most of the hospitals," he said, "are on a cash and credit basis which is flexible enough to meet the present emergency. There is no shortage of hospital supplies."

George Secord, president of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association, said yesterday that the 1,500 independent druggists who belong to his organization will extend credit "to the limit" to prevent any one from going without needed medicines or sick room supplies.

MOVIE STUDIOS REDUCE WAGES AT HOLLYWOOD

Some Stars Ask Legal Advice.

Hollywood, Cal., March 8.—(AP)—To enable the studios to weather the financial storm and go ahead with pictures now in the making, salary reductions of 25 and 50 per cent were accepted by employés of three motion picture concerns today. Another studio was on a four weeks' "pay holiday," another was considering acceptance of the cuts, and two others were expected to fall in line shortly.

The studios at which pay cuts were accepted at massmeetings were Columbia, Paramount, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Representatives of about 15,000 unionized employés will send their decision to Pat Casey, assistant to Will Hays, tomorrow.

Others Agree to Cuts.

In approving the salary reduction proposal of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Columbia studio employés agreed to extend their cuts beyond eight weeks, as requested, if that should become necessary, with the provision salaries be increased within that time, if possible.

Savings of $5,200,000 from the normal pay roll disbursements would be effected during the eight weeks, including the $800,000 at the Fox studio, where the 1,900 employés agreed to forego salaries for four weeks.

Seek Lawyers' Advice.

Nearly all the writers and directors at Warner Bros.-First National signed the pay cut agreement. Actors and actresses took the matter under advisement, however, to confer with their managers and attorneys.

Smaller salaries at Warner Brothers-First National were paid today in cash, and studio notes were presented to those drawing the larger wages.

The pay cuts will affect all the ruling executives of the industry, including workers in the New York offices and exchanges throughout the country. They will apply also to workers in the offices of Will H. Hays, head of the producers and distributors' organization.

ROCKEFELLER SR. STATES FAITH IN NATION'S FUTURE

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 8.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller said here today that he had every confidence in American banking institutions and in the "good people" of the United States.

At his winter home, the Casements, in nearby Ormond, isolated from the stress of the financial world, but nevertheless in constant touch with northern centers of finance, the 93 year old philanthropist today consented to deliver through the Associated Press a message of cheer to the millions of bank depositors affected by the moratorium.

"Tell them just this," the aged financier said. "I have every confidence in our bankers and in our good people."

He refused to comment further.

PRESS MEETINGS INFORMAL FOR NEW PRESIDENT

Roosevelts Call on Former Justice Holmes.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 8.—[Special.]—Things that "just don't happen" are happening all the time at the White House in these new days. During President Roosevelt's first press conference today the President shook hands and talked freely. The heartiest laughs were those of the President.

Mr. Roosevelt, while busy with conferences, most of them dealing with the banking situation, took time out to accompany Mrs. Roosevelt to call on Oliver Wendell Holmes, retired justice of the Supreme court, who was celebrating his 92d birthday.

Tonight the President still was at work, having summoned leaders of congress to the White House to discuss with them the plans for the special session opening at the capitol tomorrow noon.

Surprise for Veterans.

The first of Mr. Roosevelt's press conferences surprised some veteran Washington correspondents.

The President's press secretary, Stephen T. Early, had let it be known that Mr. Roosevelt wished to shake hands with all the reporters and have those whom he did not know introduced to him.

"I've never heard of anything like this," murmured a white haired correspondent.

"Hello, I'm glad to see you. This is fine," the President greeted the reporters, and for some he had a personal word or message.

The President then leaned back in his easy chair, smoking a cigaret in a long holder. Mrs. Roosevelt came in. He stopped to chat with her for a moment privately. Later during the interview Elliott Roosevelt, one of the President's sons, pushed his way in to say good-by.

"Good luck to you, son," the President called to him, and turning to the reporters, he mentioned that Elliott is starting for a new life in the southwest.

Explains His Methods.

The President began by saying that in his press conferences he was never to be quoted directly, unless statements were given out in writing. News given orally by Mr. Roosevelt in the conferences is to be ascribed to him without quotation marks. Mr. Roosevelt made his next classification "background material." That is not to be ascribed to the President, but may be used by the writers on their own authority. Warning the correspondents good naturedly to be careful, Mr. Roosevelt said he had no desire to revive an "Ananias club," which was created by his famous fifth cousin, Theodore Roosevelt.

"There Isn't Any News."

Having so outlined his plans, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Now as to news, I don't think there is any."

In a few minutes it became known he was to ask congress tomorrow for broad powers to deal with the banking situation, and that the permanent banking program would be held up for a couple of weeks.

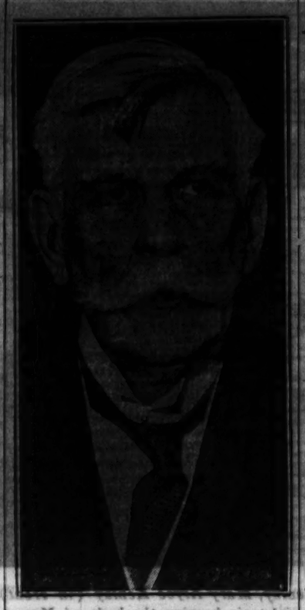

Among the visitors at the executive office today was Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law school, mentioned as a possibility for the permanent post as attorney general, now held temporarily by Homer S. Cummings.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and Senator William Gibbs McAdoo of California discussed the banking situation with the President. J. David Stern, publisher of the Philadelphia Record, with Dr. Luther Harr, professor of finance at the University of Pennsylvania, discussed the gold problem.

PLACED ON PROBATION.

Paul Bones, 19 years old, 9343 Woodlawn avenue, who was shot and captured Sunday by railroad detectives as he was taking coal from a car on the Belt Railway of Chicago, was placed on probation for six months yesterday by Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT STARTS FOR ARIZONA TO BECOME RANCHER

Washington, D. C., March 8.—[Special.]—Bound for the free west, where he will be unplagued by folk seeking his influence as the President's son, Elliott Roosevelt left the White House at 10:30 this morning. He is bound with Ralph Hitchcock, a friend, for Tucson, Ariz., where he will start his new life on one of the ranches owned by Mrs. John C. Greenway, long time friend of the Roosevelts. The two young men are driving west.

FRANCE NAMES A NEW ENVOY TO WASHINGTON

PARIS, March 8.—(AP)—André Lefevre de la Boulaye, veteran of the French diplomatic service, was named ambassador to Washington today.

He succeeds Ambassador Paul Claudel, who was named to the Brussels post, succeeding Charles Corbin, who in turn was appointed to go to London. Charles Alphand, former minister to Dublin, was named ambassador to Moscow. Aime Joseph de Fleurlau, ambassador to London, and Count Francois Robert de Jean, ambassador to Moscow, will retire.

De La Boulaye had been assistant director in the foreign ministry. In that position he received President Roosevelt a year ago when the latter was in Paris. The new ambassador, who is 57 years old, was first secretary of the embassy in Washington during the administration of Woodrow Wilson. During that time he became well acquainted with President Roosevelt, who was assistant secretary of the navy.

PUBLIC ENEMY PUTS UP $10,000 CASH IN COURT

"Bond set at $10,000," said Criminal Court Judge Fardy yesterday.

"Here it is," said William (Three Fingered Jack) White, public enemy and labor racketeer.

A roll of bills came from his pocket. Stripping eighteen $500 bills and ten $100 bills from it, he tossed them to Clerk Fred Holar. A charge of carrying a concealed weapon had been reinstated against him by order of Prosecutor Charles Dougherty.

Horner Receives Dry Repeal Bills; U. S. Curbs Raids Here

The Illinois prohibition and search and seizure act repeal bills will be signed after Gov. Horner returns from Chicago to Springfield, possibly today or tomorrow.

The governor made this announcement last night after he had attended the funeral of Oscar G. Foreman here. The bills had arrived from Springfield earlier in the day and it had been expected that Gov. Horner would sign them in Chicago last night.

The bills when signed by Gov. Horner will place responsibility for prohibition enforcement entirely in the hands of the federal government.

See Nullification Here.

The bills arrived in Chicago on the heels of the announcement by Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of the prohibition bureau at Washington, that the bureau would specialize on eradicating the sources of liquor supply and leave the speakeasy problem to the states.

Political observers held that the two developments meant, in effect, the nullification of prohibition in Chicago without actual repeal. They maintained that position in the face of a statement by M. L. Harney, prohibition administrator for the Chicago district, that there would be no letup in speakeasy raids.

Harney warned speakeasy owners that the instructions from Washington do not mean that Chicago is to be wide open to the booze retailers.

"Raids on saloons and speakeasies will be continued," Administrator Harney said. "The new instructions mean only that the agents will have to work harder for evidence, as there is no longer any money provided for 'buys.'"

Police Commissioner James P. Allman withheld comment on the liquor situation until Gov. Horner has affixed his signature to the repeal bills.

DRY RAIDERS EASE UP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 8.—[Special.]—What amounts to a lessening of the federal restrictions upon the sale of liquor in speakeasies, hotels and clubs was announced today by Amos W. Woodcock, federal director of the prohibition bureau of the department of justice.

At a press conference Mr. Woodcock announced that henceforth federal agents will concentrate their activities against the commercial sources of beer, wines, and liquors and leave the problem of handling the speakeasies to local authorities. He said that his bureau could not operate efficiently against saloons and speakeasies by attempting to stamp them out through raids. The future policy, he said, will be directed toward drying up speakeasies and other places where liquor is sold at retail by cutting off their source of liquor supply.

Sporadic Attacks Possible.

In making his announcement, the chief prohibition enforcement officer said that field agents have been informed of the new policy and instructed to direct their efforts toward stills, rum running rings and other supply sources. The director added, however, that in some cases where speakeasies are mixed up in conspiracy cases or where private citizens call on the prohibition bureau to assist them in closing up a place, sporadic attacks on liquor retailers may be made.

"This new order means that the prohibition bureau at last realizes it cannot enforce prohibition against the wishes of the whole people," Representative Fred A. Britten of Chicago said today. "I called upon the bureau today and asked them what the new instructions actually meant. I was told by one of the officials that, from now on, the dry agents in the Chicago area will be expected to direct their efforts toward developing big cases and to stop fooling with small ones which only clutter up the federal courts. I was told that from now on the federal duo will not direct its attack against saloons, speakeasies, clubs, or hotels where liquor is sold or consumed."

Fight Losing Battle.

For several years the dry unit has fought a losing fight in its attempt to enforce the prohibition amendment. The more recent expressions of public sentiment against prohibition also have served to discourage federal enforcement methods which bring agents in contact with large numbers of citizens.

Director Woodcock blamed recent congressional restrictions on enforcement methods for the bureau's inability to make headway against the speakeasy. He said the ban on liquor purchases by dry agents and the shutting off of funds for payments to dry agents "will make it virtually impossible for the bureau to be effective against speakeasies in most jurisdictions."

Arkansas Vote on Repeal Set for July 18 in Bill

Little Rock, Ark., March 8.—(AP)—A bill was sent to Gov. Futrell for signature by the Arkansas legislature late today calling for a popular referendum on prohibition repeal in this state July 18, when delegates will be elected to a convention to be held here Aug. 1. The result of the referendum will be binding on delegates whose votes will be cast as a unit for or against ratification of the prohibition repeal amendment.

THRONGS TO PASS MAYOR'S BIER IN CITY HALL TODAY

His Body to Lie in State Through Day.

avenue to the Logan monument, around the city hall, and in the neighborhood of the home, where, in the bay window of the modest parlor, the body was placed for the day and night. Crowds struggled outside to get a glimpse of coffin or family. Police, their voices softened, kept them moving.

At 2:20 o'clock in the afternoon the coffin was opened for the neighbors to take their last look at one who was not only mayor but a personal friend, one whose quiet benefactions had spread happiness in many places for years. For the rest of the afternoon and evening they moved through the house, wearing a path from kitchen to parlor.

The most emotional scene was at the railroad station. The crowd began gathering early here and by 9:30 there were ten thousand or more pressed along all the walks and entrances, leaning from the bridges over the tracks, and spreading along the concourse and boulevard. Hundreds of police under Deputy Commissioner Alcock kept the lines open for passengers and cleared the route from the baggage car to the waiting funeral cars.

Aldermen Await Bier.

"Give the mayor a chance to move through here when he comes," said one policeman. Members of the city council, headed by Ald. John Coughlin, who was protected from the cold and searching winds by a high fur collar, waited at the edge of the tracks. Gov. Horner and State's Attorney Thomas Courtney had boarded the train at Matteson, 30 miles out, and sat with the members of the family as the train entered the city.

The mayor's three daughters, Mrs. F. J. Jirka, Mrs. Richey Graham and Mrs. Floyd W. Kenley, and the mayor's favorite granddaughter, Vivian, wept anew as they came again to familiar sights. They had been under a strain of waiting and hoping and grief for many days. Now this was almost too much for them. To Vivian her grandfather was the greatest man on earth, and her name was the last on his lips.

Mists came to the earth and it began to rain gently as the tolling bell on the engine of the funeral train sounded nearer and nearer. It was just 9:45 o'clock when the car stopped in the allotted place.

Other Officials Go Aboard.

The doorways bulged with black coated figures and peering faces. Hands were outstretched and other officials, guards, and friends were helped aboard at the moment of rest. This car of the Florida East Coast railway, out of the land of sunshine, began to deliver its burdens to this gray northern spring.

First came the flowers, drooping lilies and roses, then a glimpse of silken banners. Many hands reached upward. The official pallbearers were lost in the multitude of those ready to take this burden.

Cameras and flashlights. Then a shout of "All ready!" and the bronze casket came into view, its blunt end thrust outward toward the crowd. The official flag of the city was draped over it. Hands reached up, a line was formed, and in a few minutes it was borne through the throng to the hearse. The aldermen and guards took up their position and escorted it for this short distance, then climbed into their cars for the long ride through the city.

A Silent Procession.

When the mayor returned home from Europe six months ago brass bands crashed a triumphal way for him down the avenue. Yesterday's ride was marked by silence. Not even the notes of Chopin's march, so sad at first and then rising to the vision of new life, were heard on this homeward journey.

"The end of the road," sighed Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, as the body of the mayor came into his view.

All ways had been cleared for this parade, and it moved at good pace down Michigan avenue, through lanes of bared heads, to Washington street. The hearse was escorted by motorcycle police.

Crowd at City Hall.

The procession, which was many blocks long, turned west into Washington street and here encountered a great mass of people around the city hall, which was draped in black and purple. All the loop streets were thronged thickly, but on the west side the crowds thinned out and the automobiles moved more rapidly. Two schoolhouses were passed, the children all out in front, lined up and holding flags at awkward positions in their little hands, trying hard to be quiet. Another turn was made on Sacramento boulevard, then Douglas boulevard, and South Central avenue to Ogden and directly to the Millard avenue home.

As this home was approached the crowds grew thicker again and there were flags out in almost all the houses. The mayor's home is a modest two story brick structure. A row of police stood in front of the door and barred all but officials. But the house was soon filled with these. Many hands aided in arranging the casket here. The parlor was small and it had been cleared of all furniture. A canvas had been put down to protect the oriental rug.

Floral Tribute from President.

The coffin was placed in the front window, under a bank of ferns, the standard of the American flag at the head, the flag of the Cook County council of the American Legion at the foot. The red and white of the official flag with its big red star was over the bronze coffin and the only floral tribute laid there was the spray of lilies sent by President Roosevelt.

Within an hour after the train arrived the body of the mayor was in its place here and the casket was opened for a few minutes to permit a few close friends to view it. The face of the mayor was peaceful as though he had fallen asleep. Lines of emaciation and suffering had passed away.

Members of his cabinet looked at his body a moment and then turned to conference in another room over the arrangements for the next two days. There was no political talk heard. A moratorium had been declared on this. The women of the family collapsed when they reached home and were attended in an upstairs room. Mrs. Otto Kerner, wife of the attorney general, was one who remained with them. On the way from the train home they asked Ald. Henry Sonnenschein, the mayor's secretary for many years, to see that the doors of the house were not closed to the neighbors. They did not want the mayor's friends kept away.

Old Friends View Body.

And so at 2:20 in the afternoon, half an hour before the official time for opening the house, the police formed a line at the back door and the people of the neighborhood began to pass through the house. They were of all kinds, women in furs and women in old shawls, rich and poor together, a few Negroes, two Sisters of Charity, old men who had known the kindness of Mayor Cermak, boys and girls who wept openly. The waiting line stretched for three blocks all afternoon and it was announced that the house would be kept open all night if necessary.

This Lawndale district is populous, a district of two story flats and small houses, with a few factory chimneys. It was from here that Anton Cermak climbed to wealth and power, identifying himself with it from that day in 1891 when he was fired by the mine boss at Braidwood and walked north to seek his fortune, his worldly belongings tied up in a bandana handkerchief. Perhaps even then he heard the mystic bells of his future, as they sounded to Dick Whittington on the outskirts of London.

Where His Career Began.

It was here that he started his first humble business in kindling wood, and then took up teaming and finally real estate and banking. Here, too, he began work as a political precinct captain and fought his way upward in the hard fisted struggle for domination. And so everybody knew him and everybody wanted to see the last of him. It took a long time.

Those that missed this opportunity may go downtown today, for the body will be taken from the home this morning and by 10 o'clock will be resting on a catafalque in the central archway of the city and county building, both of which the mayor had ruled with an iron hand. Five hundred police in dress uniform will form the lines through the building. There will be a brief ceremony here in the morning, when the Rev. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's church, will say a benediction over the coffin.

The official list of pallbearers for the funeral tomorrow was announced yesterday by Ald. Sonnenschein. Gov. Horner, who visited the house yesterday with the other officials, and Patrick Nash, chairman of the Democratic county central committee, will march in front of the casket. The others will be Attorney General Otto Kerner, Albert Horan, bailiff of the Municipal court; E. J. Kelly, president of the south park board; Ald. James B. Bowler, Moe Rosenberg, M. S. Szymczak, city controller; Ald. John Toman, Joseph Cerhant, Ald. Sonnenschein, and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney.

The body will remain in the city hall until 10 a. m. tomorrow when the funeral procession to the Stadium will start. The route of this will be on Randolph street, west to Canal street, south to Washington and west to the Stadium. The order of march is still unsettled, as members of the mayor's family have asked that the local societies in which he was interested be allowed to participate. Public officials, federal troops, National Guardsmen, and various other groups will take part in the march.

At the Stadium civic rites will be held, and not any religious ritualistic service. The Rev. Daniel J. Frawley, pastor of St. Jerome's Catholic church, 1709 Lunt avenue, will talk on Cermak's loyalty to friends. Rabbi Louis L. Mann of Sinai temple will talk on his character, and the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will speak on the late mayor's leadership. Gov. Horner will deliver the eulogy.

After this Masonic and Bohemian services will be read at Bohemian National cemetery, 5360 North Crawford avenue, where the mayor will be buried tomorrow afternoon. The route from the Stadium to the cemetery will be west on Washington boulevard, north on Sacramento boulevard to Humboldt boulevard, west in Palmer square to Kedzie avenue, north to Irving Park boulevard, and west to Crawford avenue.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, named 25 prominent men and women yesterday to represent the party at the funeral. Frank C. Walker of New York, treasurer of the national committee, headed the list as chairman.

The Chicago Board of Trade, the Chicago Crime commission, and members of the All Chicago Kiwanis clubs are among the organizations that have appointed special committees to attend.

THOUSANDS PAY TRIBUTE AT MAYOR'S HOME

From the time the doors of the Cermak home at 2348 South Millard avenue were opened at 2:20 p. m., until late in the evening, visitors passed the bier of the mayor at the rate of 3,500 an hour. The line was constantly augmented by new arrivals.

At 10:45 p. m. the lines of passing mourners were halted while the Polish Singers' alliance, a chorus of eighty, sang hymns in the house. At the same time a Bohemian chorus of sixty sang outside the home. The march of the thousands was taken up fifteen minutes later.

Midnight found 12,000 to 15,000 persons still awaiting an opportunity to pass the mayor's casket. Residents of the neighborhood, realizing that those in line were cold and sometimes hungry, voluntarily carried out pots of coffee and plates of sandwiches. This, they explained, was their way of showing respect to the memory of the mayor.

Thousands of telegrams of condolence on the death of the mayor were received by his associates and family. One was from Ignac Jan Paderewski, pianist, who was premier of Poland for a time.

None of those who visited the Cermak residence were more grief stricken than Mr. and Mrs. Martin Fuxa of Braidwood, Ill. Mrs. Fuxa, 75 years old, is an aunt of the mayor, and he lived for a time with them when he was a boy.

At the time the coffin containing the body of Mayor Cermak reached his home a mass was being said for him in the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, a short distance away. The Rev. John Weaver, pastor, said the mayor had been a consistent supporter of all the churches in the neighborhood.

The flag which was draped over Mayor Cermak's coffin yesterday was that of the city of Chicago. The municipal flag is white, with two horizontal blue bars, each one-sixth as wide as the flag, and set one-sixth of the distance from its top and bottom. Between the bars, next to the staff, are two bright red, six pointed stars. The flag of the mayor is the municipal flag with a gold mural crown set in the upper bar of blue. There are 28 other emblems which various city officials and departments may use upon the municipal flag, but they are rarely, or never, used.

John F. Curry, Tammany leader; John H. McCooey of Brooklyn, Democratic national committeeman, and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City will leave New York for Chicago this noon to attend the funeral. Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, appointed them as representatives at the rites.

In respect to the memory of Mayor Cermak the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's organizations canceled its all day meeting which was scheduled for tomorrow.

ROBBER OF SIX FILM THEATERS CAPTURED IN 7TH

George Genovese, 43 years old, formerly of St. Louis, was arrested last night as he was attempting to rob Miss Gertrude Creger, ticket seller for the Biograph theater at 2433 Lincoln avenue. Shortly afterward he confessed that he had robbed six other motion picture theater cashiers since Feb. 7.

The capture of the bandit was made by two theater employés, who rushed out when Miss Creger sounded a buzzer alarm from her cage. She was just handing over $75 to Genovese.

DEMOCRATS FEAR G. O. P. MAY BALK MAYORALTY VOTE

'old Informal Talks on Cermak Successor.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Politics is being held in abeyance until after the funeral of Mayor Cermak tomorrow, but several informal group parleys were held yesterday over the question of filling the vacancy in the mayor's chair. While the talk among Democratic committeemen seemed most generally to favor the holding of a special mayoralty election on June 5, the day of the judicial election, with candidates to be nominated by conventions instead of by direct primaries, some Democratic chiefs began to argue that special primaries would be necessary.

A legislative program will not be mapped out by the organization until after the Cermak funeral, but Democratic chiefs declared that emergency measures, which require a two-thirds vote, would be extremely doubtful if the Republicans follow the urging of their party committee and oppose emergency bills to cover the election.

Republicans for Primary.

The general Republican view is that the Democratic organization is sitting on a powder keg in the form of suppressed jealousies, which may flare up over the question of succession to Mayor Cermak, and that this would give opportunity to the Republicans. The latter in general are for a primary, which would tend to throw things wide open for the entry of many candidates. The Democratic view is that this would plunge Chicago into a blatant primary campaign and injure the chances of getting a mayor who would continue the Cermak policies at the city hall.

One line of thought expressed during the day was that if Republican hostility should thwart the passage of emergency election bills the latter might put through as ordinary legislation to become effective July 1, the election then to be set for early in July. This, it was pointed out, would entail the expense of a special election, the blame for which might then be thrown upon the Republicans. The Democratic idea is that an election in the fall would keep Chicago embroiled in a political campaign during the World's Fair.

Committee Meets Next Week.

The Democratic state committee is to meet next week to elect a national committeeman as successor to Mayor Cermak. The expectation is that Gov. Horner will be chosen, if he cares to accept; otherwise County Chairman Pat Nash may be picked.

As to whether the city council shall pick an acting mayor to serve until the next mayor is elected, that question remains undecided. The city law department is to be asked for an opinion after the funeral.

CITY'S BUSINESS LEADERS PRAISE CERMAK'S WORK

Business leaders of Chicago paid tribute to the work of Mayor Cermak in a statement issued yesterday by George W. Rossetter in behalf of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

"The association desires to record its complete recognition of the overwhelming loss that Chicago has suffered through the untimely death of its mayor and to extend to his family and his great circle of friends the sympathy of the association's membership," the statement said.

"Few men have been chosen to be mayor of Chicago who have so well understood the needs of the city, its resources, and its obligations. The marked improvement in public order, in public finance, and in the fidelity and intelligence with which all public services were accomplished, must be attributed to Mr. Cermak's extraordinary understanding of the essential elements of good government, and to his unusual capacity for organization.

"It should be—and is—a source of the keenest regret to every citizen of Chicago who is concerned for the welfare of his city, that before his term of office had been half finished, Mr. Cermak's life should be ended and his work of reconstruction and regeneration of the great municipality he loved so well should be stopped."

Former Dry Press Agent Is Injured in Police Cell

Arthur Lynch, 36 years old, 1664 Farwell avenue, a former prohibition press agent, under arrest on charges made by the parents of two boys, was taken to the Ravenswood hospital last night with cuts received in a cell at the North Damen avenue police station. After receiving first aid he was returned to his cell. Two months ago Lynch's wife, Amelia, charged that he and Mrs. Beata Brucer, then president of the Cook County W. C. T. U., were too friendly. The accusations were denied.

Civil War Twins Mark Ninetieth Birthday Today

Otto Affeld of Brooklyn (left in both pictures) and his brother, Charles Affeld of Evanston, said to be the only surviving civil war twins, who will be 90 years old today. Charles is the oldest member of the Union League and City clubs in Chicago. The picture in uniform was taken at Cairo, Ill., in 1861. The brothers served four years in Battery B, Chicago light field artillery.

MRS. GILL GAINS; ZANGARA ENTERS HIS PLEA TODAY

Miami, Fla., March 8.—(AP)—Improvement was noted today in the condition of Mrs. Joe H. Gill, Miami society woman, wounded by Giuseppe Zangara at the time he shot Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago.

Mrs. Gill's physicians said, however, her condition remains critical because of an infection which entered the wound. The infection was believed subsiding today.

Giuseppe Zangara, the swarthy little immigrant who killed Mayor Cermak and is sorry only because President Roosevelt wasn't the victim, will plead tomorrow as to his guilt or innocence of first degree murder.

The same lawyers who represented him at an earlier trial, when he received sentences totaling 80 years for trying to kill Mr. Roosevelt and wounding three of the five persons struck by wild shots, will represent Zangara. They are Lewis Twyman, J. M. McCaskill, and Albert E. Raia.

There was no hint in advance as to what Zangara's plea would be. He was calm and bowed and smiled when he faced the crowded courtroom yesterday for a preliminary hearing.

A plea of guilty would necessitate a hearing of evidence by Judge Thompson. A plea of not guilty would require a jury trial.

Zangara's jailers say he declares he is not sorry he killed Mayor Cermak and blames the incident on "that woman who knocked my arm up when I shoot at Roosevelt."

Plan Luncheon

Charles Ernest Affeld, who is believed to be one of the only surviving pair of twins who fought through the civil war in the Union army, will be given a luncheon today by the City club in honor of his 90th birthday. Mr. Affeld is the oldest living member of that organization and of the Union league club. His twin brother is Otto Affeld of Brooklyn.

He and his brother were born in Prussia, and were brought to Chicago by their parents when they were 4 years old. They enlisted in battery B of the Chicago light field artillery in May, 1861, when they were 18 years old, and served for more than three years.

Mr. Affeld, who lives at 1210 Michigan avenue, Evanston, retired from business as an insurance broker in 1925. He and his brother are still active and in good health.

Irish Senate Delays Bill to Abolish Oath to the King

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, March 8.—(AP)—President Eamon de Valera's bill to abolish the oath of allegiance to the British crown was held up in the senate today upon adoption of a motion that provisions of the proposal be made the subject of negotiations between this government and the United Kingdom, in an effort to obtain an amicable settlement. The bill was passed by the lower house March 1.

PRESIDENT'S AID HERE TO ATTEND CERMAK FUNERAL

Lieut. Col. Campbell B. Hodges, military aid to President Roosevelt, arrived in Chicago yesterday morning to represent the chief executive at the funeral services for Mayor Cermak. Lieut. Col. Hodges met the funeral train at the Park Row station and was a member of the cortége which escorted the casket to the Cermak home. Last evening he went to the home to deliver the condolences of President Roosevelt to the mayor's family.

"President Roosevelt instructed me to extend his deepest sympathy to Mayor Cermak's bereaved family, his friends, and the citizens of Chicago," said Lieut. Col. Hodges. "Except for the grave emergency facing the country in Washington, the President said, he himself would be here. In his absence I have come to pay his respects."

U. OF I. TRUSTEES DEMAND DEVINE REVEAL CHARGES

House Decides to Make Inspection Trip.

Springfield, Ill., March 8.—[Special.]—The trustees of the University of Illinois today called upon Representative John P. Devine [Dem., Dixon] to produce evidence of a near scandal at the university, at which Devine hinted on the floor of the house yesterday.

In a wire sent to Devine from Chicago late today Edward E. Barrett, president of the trustees, and Harry Woodburn Chase, president of the university, said they knew of no scandal and that the university had nothing to conceal.

Change Attitude on Trip.

After Devine had made his charges, the house voted not to accept President Chase's invitation to make a biennial inspection of the college. This action was rescinded today when the members passed a resolution presented by Representative R. V. Libonati [Rep., Chicago] proposing that ten members make arrangements to conduct both house and senate to Urbana.

Devine's point that the trip, which last session cost the state $1,100, should be abandoned, was won, in part, however, for Libonati's resolution provided that each member pay his own expenses.

Message to Devine.

The wire to Devine read:

"You are reported having stated on the floor of the house: 'I am informed that were it not for the influence of one man the university would be faced with a scandal which would rock the state.'

"We know of no scandal and the university has nothing to conceal. If you have been correctly quoted the board of trustees and the president of the university earnestly request that you meet with them at your earliest convenience in order that, as the elected representatives of the people of Illinois for the management of the university, any alleged scandal may be brought directly to their attention in the interests of the people and of the university. A special meeting will be called to suit your convenience."

Mr. Devine's comment upon the wire was limited to one sentence. "The trustees," he said, "will be given a full opportunity to explain a number of things to this session of the legislature."

ERROR IN DISPATCH.

A quotation from a letter written to the state legislature by President Harry W. Chase of the University of Illinois, printed Wednesday in a Springfield dispatch, incorrectly quoted Dr. Chase wrote was, "The question has been raised whether the university should not be abandoned this year in order to save expenses." What Dr. Chase wrote was "The question has been raised whether the annual visit of the legislators to the university should not be abandoned, etc.".

Robbed in Evanston

MRS. CHARLES E. PARKHILL.

Evanston police yesterday sought two well dressed gunmen who took $40 and jewelry valued at $1,500 from three women in the residential section near the Northwestern university campus on Tuesday night. The victims are Mrs. Charles Edward Parkhill, 630 Library place, widow of a meat company executive; Mrs. J. H. Broackway, the wife of an advertising executive, and Mrs. A. B. Cully, a widow, both of the Orrington hotel, Evanston. As they drove up in front of the Parkhill home another car stopped directly behind them and the gunmen appeared.

SCHOOL BOARD PAYS TRIBUTE TO MAYOR CERMAK

The school board yesterday adopted unanimously a resolution honoring the late Mayor Cermak and then adjourned its regular meeting until Monday.

The resolution, which was introduced by Trustee William D. McJunkin, declared that the mayor's death "marks the loss of a loyal friend of public education and a stalwart patron of the Chicago public schools."

Similar action was taken at a brief meeting of the sanitary district board. Trustee Ross A. Woodhull introduced the resolution and delivered a eulogy.

Programs in memory of Mayor Cermak will be held in the public schools today. All the schools will be closed tomorrow. Members of the school board, teachers, and students will march in the funeral procession.

SALES TAX BILL ADVANCED; SHY ENACTING VOTES

15 Amendments Imperil Its Objective.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., March 8.—[Special.]—In the face of growing opposition from downstate Republicans and a few of their own party as well, Democratic leaders in the house of representatives today succeeded in sending the 3 per cent sales tax bill to third reading. A test of the measure's strength gave it 82 votes with 51 members opposing.

So the advancement was not considered particularly auspicious because of the requirement of 102 votes if the levy is to take effect immediately. The bill thus must pick up 20 favorable votes by Wednesday, when an attempt will be made to pass it.

Fifteen Amendments Proposed.

The push from second to third reading was accomplished despite an unexpected assault upon the bill by the Republican floor leader, Elmer J. Schnackenberg of Chicago. Schnackenberg introduced a series of fifteen amendments, which Gov. Horner felt would have devitalized the bill. Their effect would be to change the tax collection agency from the state department of finance to county collectors.

Legislative authorities said that these amendments if adopted would peril the bill's constitutionality. Because Schnackenberg is a Chicagoan and the sales tax would provide funds to care for the state's unemployment, most of whom are in Chicago, it had been felt that he would be friendly toward it.

Amendments Not Pressed.

Schnackenberg did not push his amendments today, and it was reported that a telephone call from Chicago preceded this decision.

Asked to explain the amendment, he said that he felt the county collector, who now gathers other taxes, was the logical official to collect receipts from the sales tax. He said that he would confer with some unnamed individuals in Chicago between now and the convening of the assembly next week and that these conferences would determine if he would ask that the bill be recalled from third reading and his amendments passed.

Amendments adopted today did not change the major provisions of the bill. F. W. Lewis [Dem., Robinson] attempted to amend it so that counties would be given an option on applying the tax, and this proved the test of strength. His amendment was beaten, 82 to 51.

Frederick W. Rennick [Rep., Buda] tried to exempt foodstuffs from the tax, but was also voted down. Sol Hardy [Dem., Marshall] wanted to cut the levy from 3 to 2 per cent. This likewise went by the board.

SMALL IMMUNITY ACT REPEALED BY ILLINOIS SENATE BY 37-0 VOTE

Springfield, Ill., March 8.—[Special.]—Without any fuss or feathers, with only a short talk required from the maker of the motion, the Illinois senate today completed the passage of the bill to repeal the Small immunity act.

On the motion of Rollo M. Shaw of Lawrenceville, Democratic majority leader, the senate concurred in the action of the house repealing the act which exempted the governor and other constitutional officers from ouster by the short and supposedly brief quo warranto method. Len Small forced this exemption through an assembly which he controlled and there had been some talk of a contest against the repealer. It now goes to Gov. Horner.

When the bill approved by the house committee on judiciary was called up for passage by Senator Shaw there was no opposition in sight. Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet, who previously had argued that the exemption was meritorious, was absent. The bill was passed 37 to 0.

The senate sent to its executive committee a resolution introduced by Senator Joseph Mendel of Chicago calling for the appointment of a special committee to "investigate the cost and selling price of milk in Chicago and the milk containers now being used" in that city.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE NEW CONGRESS.

The Seventy-third congress of the United States meets today in Washington. No congress in our history ever convened at a more difficult and momentous time, none confronted more fateful issues.

Of this the nation is gravely conscious. Of this congress must be conscious, recognizing its high duties and solemn responsibilities and inspired by the part it has been called upon to play in the restoration of our people's welfare and progress.

First and chief of the duties of the Seventy-third congress is to win back the confidence of the nation in congressional responsibility and devotion to the welfare of the nation. That confidence was lost by its predecessor, and it is only candor to say that the present congress meets in the shadow of that ill repute. The final session of the Seventy-second congress filled the nation with a justified alarm by its lack of discipline, its defiance of responsible leadership, its total disregard of the most imperative need for constructive action, especially its contempt of the most urgent and unquestionable demand for the retrenchment of expenditure essential to recovery, essential even to preservation.

This distrust remains and is a major factor in our situation. To remove it is the first duty of congress to itself and to the people, the first step toward the revival of enterprise, to the stabilization of finance, public and private; to the restoration of the nation's morale; in short, the first step back to security and prosperity.

And the means of restoring confidence in congress is plain. It will return at once when congress demonstrates its loyalty to responsible leadership, its determination to rise and remain above demoralizing faction and partisanship, its self-discipline and devotion to the general welfare, its capacity for orderly, resolute, and prompt action. The Democratic party is in complete control of both houses of congress. Its chief is President. Its chief has declared his purpose to meet the national emergency with the full force of his great influence and authority. He has the good will of the nation, which waits in anxious hope for his measures of restoration. An irresponsible congress can embarrass and retard if not defeat his effort. Its first duty is unity in the effective support and expeditious advancement of his program. He has accepted responsibility. He has asked for adequate powers to act as the emergency requires. The country supports that demand.

In the foreground of the government's problem, the paramount, the essential, factor in national recovery, is the prompt and drastic reduction of federal expenditures. The most destructive weakness of the last congress was its failure to accomplish this essential to recovery. The reason exists in the normal operation of legislative bodies. It can and must be canceled and authority concentrated for defense against the pressures of special interests and for the prompt accomplishment of a consistent program of financial relief and economic revival.

The President's spirit has found quick response throughout the nation. The courage and confidence of the American people are ready to assert themselves. The new congress can summon both to the solution of the nation's difficulties by demonstrating without delay its respect for leadership and its devotion to the common good.

CONGRESSIONAL REAPPORTIONMENT.

Among the important duties of the assembly now in session is the reapportionment of congressional districts. It is a duty unequivocally imposed by the state constitution, but it has been neglected or refused for years. By their failure to obey the clear mandate of the state's fundamental law, past assemblies have set a serious example of disrespect for their sworn duty. They have been guilty not only of breaking the oath of office but of perpetuating a condition of political injustice gravely demoralizing in the body politic, depriving citizens of their lawful representation in federal legislation.

We trust the present assembly is not willing to perpetuate this wrong. Representative Lyons of Mundelein has introduced a bill for its removal. He has drawn a reapportionment of districts which follows as rigidly as possible the principle of equality in representation. He foresees that it will be modified through political considerations, but he has done well to set a high standard and we trust the assembly will show that standard as much respect as a proper sense of duty and a proper consideration of the rights of the people to equality of representation would dictate. The previous act of reapportionment was declared invalid. The new measure should avoid the flagrant inequalities it proposed. It will be a significant test of the character of the present assembly. All good citizens of Illinois demand a fulfillment in good faith of the constitutional mandate.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

Richard Bennett, the Conservative premier of Canada, has said on the floor of the Canadian parliament that he will welcome overtures by the United States for a new trade treaty. As a matter of fact, according to THE TRIBUNE'S well informed correspondent in Ottawa, the new administration in this country had already made such overtures when Mr. Bennett spoke. The new treaty would provide for a much freer exchange of products than has been possible under the restrictive tariffs of the two countries.

This is excellent news which is in danger of being lost to sight in the midst of the present excursions and alarums over the financial situation. The opening of conversations marks a change of heart on both sides of the border, and it is a change which can only work for the good of both countries. Tariff barriers between the United States and Canada serve to separate two parts of a natural economic unit. While our farmers and our manufacturers do compete in a measure with those of Canada, in the main each country is a natural outlet for the other's excess production. Some sacrifices may have to be made in each country for the sake of the larger good, but in this connection it is well to remember that the sacrifices will not be made by consumers, who will be the gainers in both countries.

It is interesting to observe that the negotiators in Canada will be of the Conservative party, which defeated the reciprocity treaty proposed in the Taft administration, while the negotiators in this country will be Democrats, members of the party which furnished much of the opposition to the 1911 treaty in this country. Premier Bennett of Canada, indeed, emerged as a major figure in the 1911 struggle. The facts suggest that economic forces are at work to draw the countries closer together and that these forces, though negatived for a time by political expediencies, in the long run will effect a close economic union between the nations.

To what extent our trade with Canada has languished of recent years is suggested by the trade statistics just issued by the department of commerce. In January of this year we exported $12,400,000 worth of goods to Canada, as against $18,400,000 a year ago. At the same time we imported $10,700,000 worth, as against $16,500,000 a year ago. Each country has lost six million dollars' worth of export business and both have suffered in consequence. The writing of a new trade treaty between Canada and the United States, to be sure, is no guarantee that trade will return to the level of a few years ago in an instant, but it is certain that without the lowering of the tariff barriers and other restrictions the recovery will be delayed if not definitely prevented.

THE FORGOTTEN JOY OF RIVERS.

The opening of the gulf waterway is a great event in the commercial annals of the midwest. We wish it might also waken in our people a new appreciation of the possibilities of recreation on the splendid rivers of the great valley. These possibilities have been sadly neglected, as the possibilities of the Chicago lake shore were neglected by the people of the city until recent years. The development of the lake shore parks and bathing beaches has opened a gold mine of health and refreshment to this generation. The beautiful rivers of the midwest are a resource of enjoyment which still remains to be exploited. Canoeing and motor boating are increasing on the streams near Chicago and doubtless near other towns and cities. But the larger rivers, the Illinois, Wisconsin, St. Croix, Mississippi, Ohio, Tennessee, and many other streams are not used to the extent they ought to be.

Passenger steamers are few and on some large rivers entirely lacking simply because passenger traffic deserted the rivers many years ago. We hope they will be reappearing soon. The popularity of the automobile ought not to prevent us from adding to our resources the water highways. The facilities are inadequate now, but they will soon be provided when there is encouragement from the public. A trip in a comfortable steamboat on any of the greater rivers would be something to remember, and to those who can have a motor cruiser or any craft from a canoe up there are unlimited possibilities of pleasant adventure.

We ought to become river-minded. The rivers are there waiting discovery by the vacationist. Some day our people will wonder why they were so long forgotten. They are a heritage of beauty and interest. We ought to make good our claim to it.

Editorial of the Day

FIGURING THE FUTURE.

[Aurora Beacon-News.]

A British writer finished a tour of the United States not long ago and remarked that the chief trouble with America today is that it can't quite figure out just what its destiny is.

Until recently, he said, America knew that its destiny was to develop and settle a vast continent. This knowledge inspired almost every act in our national history and gave significance to every turn of events. As long as the job was unfinished people could overlook the imperfections of the present by keeping their eyes on the future.

But now the continent has been settled and developed about as completely as it needs to be. The great job that unified and inspired the nation is finished—and because we don't know what the next job is going to be we are at a loose end and our troubles look very big to us.

The visiting Englishman had another word to add to all of this. Sooner or later, he said, the American people will find a new destiny and follow it through; and in the end, he predicted, they will become "the greatest race the world has ever seen."

Now that, to be sure, is very kind and very comforting. And while we have never been famous for our national modesty it is a good thing for us to be told something like that just now. For the first part of the Englishman's comment is indisputably true, and it is precisely the thing which makes the depression so hard to bear.

Because of it we have moments in which we wonder if the end of the world is not just about at hand. Everything, we tell ourselves, is finished. The old days are done for and no new day is going to dawn. The country is going to perdition in a high-wheeled hack and there is nothing we can do about it except crouch on the mourners' bench and bay at the moon.

If we could once make ourselves realize that the biggest jobs are yet to come and the greatest days are yet to dawn we might slough off some of our pessimism. The great depression isn't the end of things; it is only an incident. Our real destiny is ahead of us, not behind us.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THERE HAS BEEN so much frenzied discussion over the frenzied financial situation that when in the midst of the wild dinner table babble of excited voices saying, "Yessir, it caught me with just exactly fifteen cents, FIFTEEN CENTS, I tell you," and "He asked me for a dime for a cup of coffee and I says to him, 'I haven't got a dime, not a single dime; I'm walking home,'" and "Well, what the President ought to do, and it would settle this whole money problem right away, is to——" our innocent hostess spoke right through the barrage of dollars, moratoriums, scrip, last dimes, and all the rest of it, and said, "Oh, do you know, I can't get another drop of gin; my bootlegger is in jail," we felt like getting right up then and there and in front of one and all going over and giving her a hearty kiss. "My bootlegger is in jail again!" It was like the sun bursting through the clouds after days of heavy rain or the first sweet flowers of spring peeping up through the black earth after the snows and blizzards of winter. Once more people are able to act and talk as they used to do. Once again people can take their minds off of moratoriums and locked up dollars and remember that their poor old bootlegger is in jail. That settles it! The skies are clearing! The storm is over! We are getting back to normalcy! Three rousing cheers!

AMERICA SINGING.

Makers of poems limpid and lilting,
Strummers of tunes romantic and tearful,
Learn the fresh music of mountains gigantic,
Heed the wild runes of free-bounding rivers;
Hark to the corn song that bursts from the prairie—
Song old as nature, dewy as morning,
Song everlasting, regenerating,
Sung by our sires in pioneer cabins,
Hummed by our mothers, by Indians threatened,
Over the cradles of burgeoning peoples.

Learn the new chants of times democratic,
Free as the ocean, strong as the tempest;
Sing the new life of comrades close-tethered;
Sing the new love that leaps over mountains,
Crossing the sea and flooding like sunrise.

Makers of poems limpid and lilting,
Leave the old tunes of vanishing nations,
Learn the fresh songs of a new world affection,
Chant the new music of brothers and lovers.

THOMAS CURTIS CLARK.

THE LEGISLATURE of this grand old commonwealth of Illinoy is shocked, scandalized, astonished, amazed, nonplused, and a few more things because the plans for the new house for the president of the state university at Champaign call for seven bathrooms. Seven bathrooms! Great jumping wildcats! Seven bathrooms! It's a sheer waste, that's what it is. Why, that's one for every day in the week, and the only time a feller takes a bath is Saturday night! Say, what are we a-comin' to?

"CAPITAL PUNISHMENT Defeated in Kansas."—Headline. We don't know anything about it, but it looks to us as though the drys were trying to hang the wets before the sacred 18th is repealed.

WELL, WELL! things always come out right, after all! For a moment we wondered if we could seek the fulfillment of a long cherished dream and go on a vacation this summer to the Unaka National forest away down in the southwestern corner of Virginia. There are great stretches of virgin woods down there and Mount Rogers almost six thousand feet high and Mount Whitetop, and the natural tunnel, and not far away is Big Stone Gap, where stands the very same lonesome pine on the very same Lonesome Pine trail that John Fox Jr. wrote his famous story about. We looked sadly and regretfully at the map before putting it away for the last time, and all of a sudden we found a town right in that neighborhood we had never heard of before. Hope came back with a whoop! And we're going there on our vacation; yessir, right close to the Unaka National forest and Mount Rogers and Whitetop and—everything. Nickelsville! Nickelsville, Virginia. That's the place! Of course, we can go there. We've got a nickel. Ho for Nickelsville!

LIGHTED WINDOWS.

I like to look in windows
Along the road, at night,
And catch a swiftly passing glimpse
Of lives, tucked in so tight;
I like to speculate about
The people whom I see:
A man beneath a bridge lamp,
A baby on his knee;
A woman setting table,
Two couples at a game;
Through all the lighted windows
The story's much the same;
But many daily dramas
I'm certain you would find,
In back of lighted windows
That look like yours and mine.
I like to drive the black night road
With soft wind in my face,
And look in lighted windows,
And watch the human race.

"GIVES HIS WIFE Only One Kiss a Year."—Headline. Oh, the little devil; he's been hoarding 'em!

WE MUST ADMIT, though with some embarrassment, that we hoarded some Roman type, and so today we will spend it on the last line instead of using script. However, we expect to issue the last line in script tomorrow. We cannot make this last line very long, as we hoarded only a little Roman type. We had it in our left sock and, of course, you can't hoard much Roman type in a left sock, especially if there's a hole in the heel.

HUMIDIFY THE AIR.

A CUBIC foot of air at a temperature of zero will absorb only little more than a half grain of water. The same air, when at a temperature of 85 degrees, can carry thirteen grains of water and, what is more, it will rob anything living or dead in order to get the water it needs. The thirst for a drink of whisky experienced by a man suffering from the dark brown taste of the morning after is mild in comparison with that of hot, dry air. When cold air is brought into a house and heated it must also be watered, else the inhabitants and the furniture will suffer.

Dr. E. C. Rosenow worked out a method of humidification for his own home, and, being a man of laboratory training, he has made it the subject of some investigation. He contends that the air should be watered at the time when and the place where it is heated. In a house heated by radiators the humidifying apparatus is attached to each set of coils. Another opinion of his is that it is not necessary to spray water into the air or even to heat it materially.

He uses pans set on the top of the radiators. On these pans there are evaporating fins, as he calls them, composed of paper supported by a wire frame work. The fins touch the water in the pans and take it up by capillary attraction. Air heated by the radiator coils flows through the space between the fins, absorbing air from them. When the paper becomes clogged with salts from the water and dirt from the air it is discarded and new fins are inserted in the frame.

The amount of fin required is one square foot for each 100 cubic feet of space in a room. Such an installation will evaporate as much as two gallons of water daily in a regular room on an ordinary day with the outside temperature and humidity about as it usually is in winter. The amount of evaporation will keep the humidity at 40 to 50 if the windows are double glassed, and at 12 to 22 if they are but single glassed. In these circumstances there should be no wall sweating, and the window sweating should not be objectionable. The moist paper cleans the air somewhat and materially lessens its bacterial content.

Dr. Rosenow's primary interest was in promoting the comfort of his family. In addition, the use of the humidifying apparatus promotes health and lessens the cost of heating, in his estimation. When air is very dry a temperature of 74 to 78 is necessary for comfort. When the humidity is as high as 40 a temperature of 68 is comfortable. There is considerable difference in the cost of heating as between air of these two temperatures.

EYE BLINKING.

Mrs. A. R. B. writes: Recently Mrs. G. wrote about her 9 year old son blinking all the time. When my child was about 7 she started this habit. I had her eyes examined and they were all right. The blinking spell lasted for a period of about two or three months. Each year, about twice—once in the spring and once in the fall—she would get these spells. Last spring she did not get the blinking spell but would twist her neck in an odd way. I thought she had some spinal trouble, so took her to a very good nerve specialist, who immediately asked me if she had ever had those blinking spells. He told me she was having the first stage of St. Vitus' dance; that the blinking eyes was in most cases the first stage, and that if parents would heed this warning how much better it would be for the child. My girl is extremely healthy, but has grown so fast. I later talked to others who had similar experiences with children who later had had this disease and in each case the child had the eye-blinking habit first.

REPLY.

There is more than one kind. They are due to different causes, have differing significance, and call for different treatments.

LITTLE DIFFERENCE.

B. L. writes: When used for frying, cooking, and general uses, which shortening is more easily digested, butter or rendered chicken fat?

REPLY.

As a rule there is no essential difference.

WORDING CONTROLS.

Nauvoo, Ill., March 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I hold a certificate of deposit from a state bank. This certificate is dated May 9, 1932, and is due six or twelve months after date. It bears interest at 4 per cent per annum. Am I within my rights in demanding payment of this certificate as of this date provided I am willing to sacrifice my interest from the 9th day of November last? Can I force the bank to pay this certificate before the 9th of next May? C. R.

The wording would control. If the wording indicates an intention that you can demand payment only at six month intervals then you are not entitled to demand payment intermediately merely because you are willing to give up interest. We could advise to better advantage if a copy of the instrument were before us.

DISPOSITION OF ESTATE.

Park Ridge, Ill., March 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A man died in November, 1930, naming his widow as executrix of the estate. All bills were paid and distribution of assets made. Attorney cannot close the estate on account of unpaid personal property tax. No bill has been received and appearance has been made at the tax office for amount due. Apparently the amount has not been agreed upon. 1. Can the estate be closed without tax bill being paid? 2. Can the city collect taxes on assets of the estate for subsequent years from 1930? 3. What is the rate of tax for 1930 and [4] is it collected on the market value of securities at the date of decease or the filing of the estate? E. M. K.

1. It is the practice of the Probate court to insist on payment.
2. Yes.
3. It varies between different taxing districts.
4. Depends on the facts as to the date of the death, whether a schedule was filed, what year's tax is in question, etc. We suggest that you inquire at the office of the assessor.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 9, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The senate, after one of the most acrimonious debates in its history, a debate in which the lie was virtually passed to President Wilson by Senator Cummins of Iowa, adopted a cloture rule by a vote of 76 to 3. Sherman of Illinois, La Follette of Wisconsin, and Gronna of North Dakota voted against cloture. Senators Sherman and Townsend of Michigan excoriated the President for his statement assailing the congress and the senate, in which, according to Senator Sherman, "a portion of the truth was deliberately omitted to arouse greater resentment against the few senators who stood against the armed neutrality bill." The most scorching attack on the President was made by Senator Cummins, who asserted that he would vote for the cloture bill, not because the President demanded it, but because he had stood for cloture ever since he first came to the senate. Foreseeing a long debate if they interrupted to defend the President's statement, Democratic leaders allowed the Republicans to assail Mr. Wilson to their heart's content. It was difficult for them to remain quiet, however, when Senator Townsend brushed aside all formalities and waded into Mr. Wilson without gloves.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The form of cloture expressly approved by the President having been established by the senate today, President Wilson will now seek advice from house members regarding the call for the extra session of congress to pass the armed neutrality measure. It is his determination not to order merchantmen armed until after conference with advisers.

SANTIAGO.—Four hundred marines from American warships were landed and have taken charge in Santiago at the request of Garcia Munez, civil governor. The Americans were landed from the mine layer San Francisco, the cruiser Olympia, the gunboat Petrel, and the gunboat Machias. There has been no fighting as a result of the arrival of the American guards and the people of Santiago have regained confidence, despite the report that Col. Betancourt of the Menocal forces is preparing to attack the rebel forces now in Santiago.

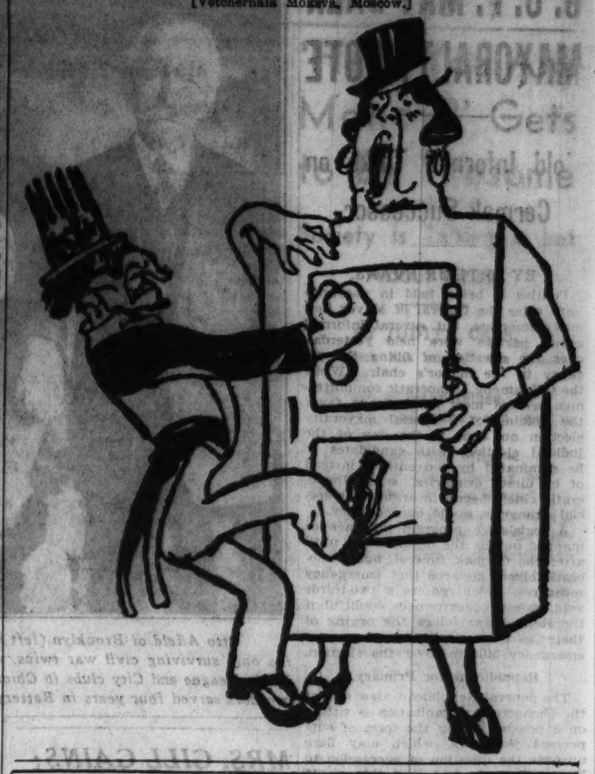

WAR SUMMARY.—The Turks on the Tigris front continue their retreat and London reports the British are now only eight miles from Bagdad. The Russians continue the pursuit of the Turks in the Caucasus and have occupied Kangarer, beyond Hamadam, Petrograd says. Paris reports the recapture of the greater part of a salient occupied by the Germans between Butte Mesnil and Maisons de Champagne. Teuton organizations were destroyed between Hill 304 and Avocourt road. Snow interfered with western front operations, Berlin says. London reports the British lines in the Ancre valley have been advanced. Berlin reports fifteen ships were sunk by submarines in the Mediterranean and also forty-seven other craft destroyed recently.

LONDON.—The morning newspapers print long obituaries of Count Ferdinand Zeppelin, the German air wizard, who died March 8 at Charlottenburg, near Berlin, from pneumonia. In most instances the comment is dispassionate, but in some cases tribute is paid to his patriotism and perseverance. Justice is done by the writers to the remarkable development of the Zeppelin airship as a traveling machine, although the achievements associated with Zeppelin's name are ascribed to his engineers. Count Zeppelin was born in Constance, Baden July 8, 1838. He became famous at the age of 70 as the builder of the world's first practical dirigible balloon. On his seventy-fifth birthday he navigated his twentieth airship to celebrate the occasion. But before he had achieved fame he had devoted a half century of his life, exhausted his personal fortune of $750,000, and sacrificed a brilliant career as a German cavalry leader, in conquering the air.

NEW YORK.—Adolphus Williamson Green, president of the National Biscuit company since 1905, and through whose efforts the concern was formed in 1898, died here after a long illness. He was 74 years old. Mr. Green was born in Boston. He went to Chicago in 1873, where he achieved unusual success as a lawyer.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

THIS CORRESPONDENCE IS CONCLUDED.

Chicago, March 5.—In the Voice of the People of March 4, under the caption of "A Perennial Dispute," I have noticed the claim of Mr. Thomas Shames that Gen. Kosciuszko was Lithuanian.

It is indeed queer that whenever a Pole becomes famous that very instant some other nation rises to claim him as its citizen. In this case I should like to correct Mr. Shames in his erroneous impression.

Gen. Tadeusz Kosciuszko was born of a wealthy Polish family, Feb. 12, 1746, in the province of Minsk, western Russia. He was educated at the military academy at Warsaw, Poland. His later education he completed in France. Upon returning from France he became a friend and aid of Sosnowski, marshal of Lithuania, likewise a Pole, and rendered valuable services. In 1776 he came to the United States and distinguished himself at Bemis Heights, Saratoga, and planned the fortifications at West Point, which to date stand as a memorial to his ability. In 1786 he returned to Poland, where he became a leader in the insurrection to liberate Poland. He was seriously wounded at the battle of Maciejowice and taken prisoner by Russia.

He was restored to liberty by Czar Paul of I. of Russia in 1796. Upon his return to Poland he was accorded most distinguished honors. He again visited the United States and congress granted him a large tract of land. He again returned to Poland, where he released all his peasants from servitude. The closing years of Kosciuszko were spent in France and Switzerland, where he died from an accident. The remains were removed to Cracow, Poland, at the wish of Czar Alexander of Russia. As an act of gratitude to Kosciuszko's memory for his gallant and distinguished acts in the cause of Polish liberty the population erected a large mound of earth, all of it carried by hand, which today remains Mount Kosciuszko, near Cracow, Poland. At this time it may be proper to state that Lithuania for several centuries was an integral part of Poland.

HISTORIC NEWS PAGES.

Chicago, March 5.—I have read with much interest the reproduction of THE TRIBUNE of July 19, 1861, appearing in last Sunday's CHICAGO TRIBUNE. I am writing this letter in hopes other issues of the years 1861-'65 will appear, reproduced in the picture section of the Sunday paper.

Reading the rumors, facts and incidents of the stirring times of the civil war in newspapers contemporary of that time is most interesting, now that we know what is true and false.

FOR A CITY MANAGER.

Cicero, Ill., March 6.—Every one regrets the death of Mayor Cermak and many now fear the return to power of some gang absorbed in greed and already in joyous mood planning a feast upon the public treasury.

This seems to be an appropriate moment to present a city manager plan to the citizens of Chicago. Every one recognizes the efficiency and economy of our civil service employes, the police and fire departments and our teachers. Why not have every employé of the city a civil service employé? Why not run the city like a business?

How would this plan do? The board of aldermen [directors] to appoint a city manager who will appoint a cabinet of superintendents of construction, purchasing, education, parks, police, fire, and administration, all from the civil service ranks. All advances in rating up to assistant superintendent are to be by examination plus the recommendations of superiors.

Control of the entire system is to be retained by the citizens [stockholders] of Chicago. Upon petition a referendum may be called and the city manager and his cabinet removed from office upon the vote of the majority.

EDWARD WILLIS.

A SATISFIED CLIENT.

Chicago, March 6.—I have heard rumors to the effect that the food donated by the unemployment relief has not been satisfactory. However, it is my opinion that some people are never satisfied and, therefore, I want to give a word of praise to the unemployment relief for the splendid work they have done and the marvelous effort they have put forth to help those in need in this time of stress.

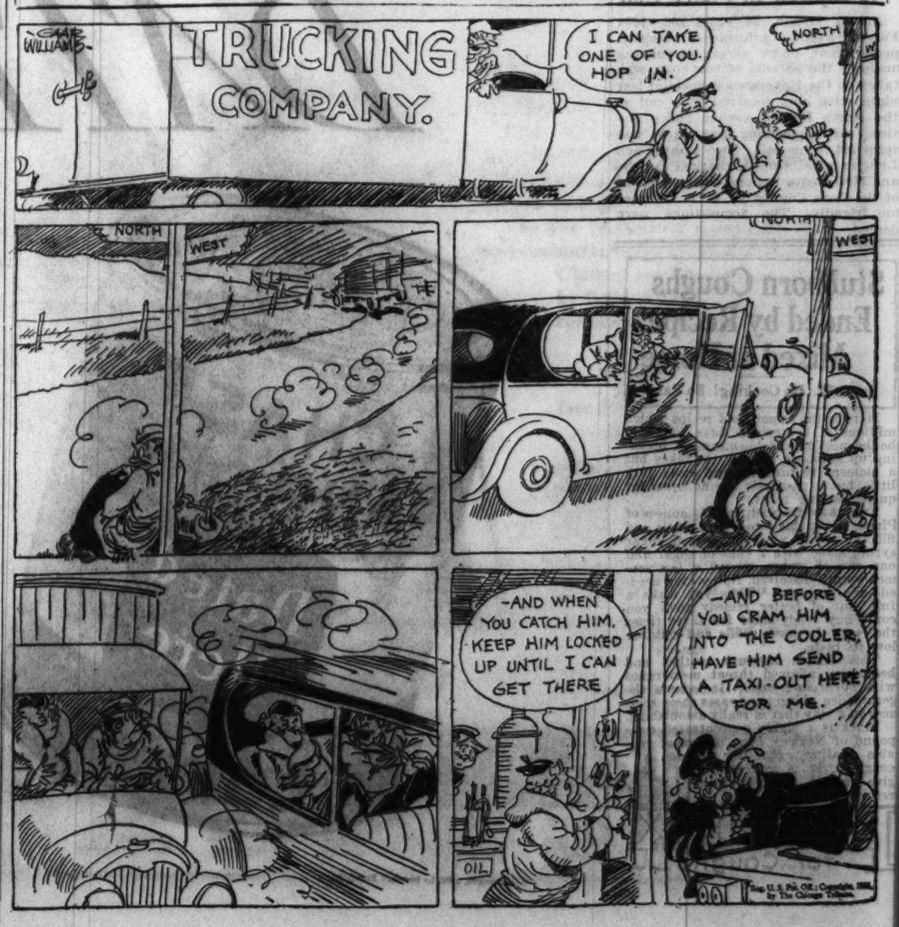

I have been receiving relief for the last few months and say emphatically that everything received from the unemployment relief has been of excellent quality and the attention I have received at all times has been courteous and kind and in no way have the people connected with the relief stations tried to convey the impression that we who have to resort to charity are inferior to any one else. THE TEMPLE OF MUSIC FUND.

Chicago, March 3.—I read in yesterday's TRIBUNE that the permanent Temple of Music cannot be completed in time for the opening of the Century of Progress Exposition. This temple of music may never be erected. As one of the dollar subscribers I suggest that all moneys collected so far be given to unemployed musicians, who are great sufferers at this time. I am sure every member of the society will gladly donate his or her share to such a good cause instead of having the money refunded.

Gourds from Vatican Seed to Be Shown

Included in Display for Garden Club.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Gourds raised from seeds sent from the Vatican will be the contribution of Mrs. Anson Cameron to the Illinois Garden club's seventh annual flower show to open the evening of March 31 on Navy pier and continue for one week. And thereby hangs a tale.

Mrs. Cameron has been brought up on these goblins of the gardening world. She played with them when she was Alta Stevens and she has used them for decoration since she has had a house of her own. They were one of the favorite interests of her late father, Charles A. Stevens.

On his estate at Lake Delavan, Wis., now the summer home of the Camerons, Mr. Stevens grew at least 60 varieties—ostrich eggs, Turks' turbans, oranges, serpents, dippers, and calabashes—and to this notable list there were added two years ago another 30 varieties by the Vatican gardener.

Reading of Mr. Stevens' hobby in an American publication, the Vatican worker of the soil sent a letter inclosing seeds from his own gourd garden and asking for as many in return.

Last summer was the first season the Camerons' gardener had an opportunity to plant the Vatican seeds. They grew and produced quite as abundantly as the American variety and it is from this collection that Mrs. Cameron is to exhibit next month on Navy pier.

And if the display is anything like the interesting and artistic effects that have been created by Mrs. Cameron and her gardeners at Lake Delavan, it is sure to take a red or blue ribbon. At Delavan the gourds are used over an arbor top, where their weird shapes show to excellent advantage.

One of the most unusual gourds ever grown at Delavan is the candy variety. It weighs close to 100 pounds, has the appearance of a cucumber, and is used for making candy. The smaller gourds Mr. Stevens used to delight in carving into weird shapes for his young friends or making into handy little baskets.

According to custom Mrs. J. Ogden Armour is again to develop one of the important exhibits for the flower show. This time it is to be a plaza in a spring garden setting. And her daughter, Mrs. John J. Mitchell, who has inherited her mother's love of gardening, is transplanting a corner of her Montecito [Cal.] estate, El Mirador, for another space on Navy pier. This exhibit will be alive with poppies and orange and lemon blossoms. From the western side of town Joy Morton is to contribute a bog garden. This will be developed at his famous arboretum at Lisle.

Out in Lake Forest Mrs. Lawrence W. Scudder, Mrs. John N. Lee, and Mrs. Lawrence Williams are devoting all of their time to the exhibit the Lake Forest Garden club is to enter. It's to be a modernistic dining room this year looking out on a kitchen garden on one side, a flower garden on the other. Mrs. Vibe K. Spicer, who has a charming old fashioned garden in Kenilworth, but has her membership in the Lake Forest club, described it yesterday. Mrs. Spicer, incidentally, is one of the few gardeners along the lake to the north who can boast of March blossoms. For two weeks she has been enjoying snowdrops and winter aconite, the small yellow blossoms that look like buttercups.

Mrs. Langdon Pearse of Winnetka is one of the other gardeners who belong in the March flower class. She has been watching her snowdrops blossom for a week. Mrs. Pearse explains that Mrs. Arthur C. Sullivan is doing a green and white garden for the Winnetka Garden club entry. And that is all she will say since the club intends to keep the exhibit a secret. Mrs. Sullivan took one of the highest awards in the show year before last.

Mrs. Garner Keeps Chauffeur and Car Used by Dolly Gann

Washington, D. C., March 8.—(AP)—Mrs. John N. Garner, the Vice President's wife, walked out of the White House front door today and rode off in a limousine—the same one that was used by Dolly Gann in the Republican régime, with the same chauffeur.

"And she's going to keep it," casually commented a bystander.

Thus, if he was correct, went glimmering Mrs. Garner's announced intention of using a medium priced car in the social régime of the vice presidency.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., March 8.—[Special.]—Mrs. Roosevelt's first conference with the cabinet hostesses (and she includes Mrs. Garner, wife of the Vice President, in that group) took place this morning in the White House with no one missing but Mrs. Harold Ickes of Chicago, wife of the secretary of the interior. Mrs. Ickes returned immediately after the inaugural festivities to her duties in Springfield as a member of the state legislature.

Mrs. Roosevelt received the ladies in the Monroe room on the second floor of the mansion and on the south side, which she has turned into the family sitting room, or "living" room. After their heart to heart talk Mrs. Roosevelt showed them over the mansion, describing the changes she has made on the second floor, and then they went out on the south side of the White House and had group photographs taken. These ladies did not remain for luncheon, for the first lady had other guests coming for lunch.

Spring Style Shows Cheer Usual Crowds

New Clothes Hold Interest Despite Crisis.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

There may be a financial crisis . . . there may be lots of shoppers who have to hunt through forgotten hideouts for a lonely quarter . . . it may be some of our best fashion show enthusiasts have had to wangle a ride to the shopping district, but notwithstanding all these March, 1933, oddities, the spring fashion shows are riotously successful. Crowds of women are out to see the new things . . . rows and rows of them, and all the equally thrilled late comers that had to stand seemed to forget such trivial things as a lack of cash.

And none of us seem to be disappointed, no matter how dejected we fe.. when we arrived, we should have been seen when we departed . . . clothes hungry shoppers, sort of tottering out of the shops in a dreamy daze, intent upon the most feminine of recreations that of assembling and reassembling a good looking spring wardrobe.

It isn't going to be difficult to do this, for the new clothes are breathtakingly knockout. Trim slim coats, with wide leather belts that you will cinch-in around your normal waist line till you gasp for your next breath . . . rows of pleats, funny little sausage affairs that lay in a line over your shoulder . . . graduated pleats, that start out with a half inch width and end in nothing . . . pleats in the peplums of jackets that accentuate a slender waistline and flare the peplum out at almost right angles and other varieties too numerous to list.

Dress and coat costumes steal the show . . . long enveloping coats, straight and snappy and rather military as to silhouette, each with inevitable belt and a silk lining the same shade as the wool of the coat. Most of these double duty coats are double breasted, with colorful gay printed frocks under them. The dresses are ingeniously fashioned, with simple flared skirtlines, unusual bodice tops and usually shortened sleeves.

Double epaulet shoulders on the coats mark them as spring models . . . for instance, one Schiaparelli original has a curving epaulet that looks exactly like a stiff half circle of the wool, and then planted right beside it is an impudent double pleated ruffle of the wool . . . and this designer hesitates at nothing for a spectacular effect. Her newest coats are fastened with the biggest clasps or frogs in captivity. Two six inch cylinders are covered with patent leather, one is sewed to one side of the chest, the other on the opposite side a good ten inches away, then a huge double loop of heavy leather cord is used for anchoring these two cylinders.

To match these gargantuan chest trappings this same coat uses a wide leather belt, fastened with the same huge shiny cylinder and heavy single loop of leather. Then to be quite feminine and perverse, this brilliant designer fashioned a vivid frock of striped chiffon, accordion pleated from shoulder to hem. It looks more like a rapidly revolving barber shop pole than anything else, but it is without any exception the most distinctive dress of the year.

Less eye filling, but every bit as unusual, are the new printed silk frock and contrasting coat combines. A very new color combination is a brick red and pale gray printed silk, the pale silvery flowers blooming brightly on a brick red field. The dress has one of the new accordion pleated skirts, shortened sleeves and a cut little bib and tucker scarf, which is really a glorified ascot. The tie is of the printed silk, with both ends cut in wide squares, and then outlined with a frill of finely pleated silk.

The dove gray wool loose coat that is mated with this dress is a honey. It has wide, loose, unpuffed sleeves, two pockets, and a high round neckline, over which is worn the frilled ends of the printed silk ascot of the dress. The coat is lined with pale gray silk.

Other successful models that caused many an envious sigh were the stunning two piece suits, the light gray and black blurred-checked skirt and a long straight, rather loose jacket of black, faced with wool to match the skirt.

Or the striped black and white suit, with the skirt stripes in V formation in front and back . . . the very brief jacket, tucked every inch of its waistline, and a few more tucks decorating the perky shoulder seams . . . and the black knee length coat lined with a gay and giddy pale green and black plaid, worn over a be-bowed plaid silk blouse and a straight streamline black skirt.

Blue, beige and gray are the favored colors with black battling for first place as the smartest contrast for slim silhouettes as well as those who are not so well dieted . . . but the thing to do is to dash to town and see these and other new ideas for yourself . . . and all of the pending fashion shows are guaranteed to make you forget everything but the fact that you would like some new spring clothes.

Beauty Shops for Men? Well, Gals Don Pants

Barber Shops Invaded by Fair Sex, Too.

An illustrated booklet of Miss Donnelly's stretching exercises may be obtained by sending a stamped, self addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

It's said that a Parisian gentleman has arrived in this country recently with the intent and purpose of opening a chain of beauty parlors catering exclusively to men.

Well, if the girls are going to wear pants in public, why not? It may be that what with the privacy of the barber shop being invaded by the fair sex, a beauty shop exclusiveness for males becomes the next step. Again it may be, from what we hear as we snoop around with ear close to the ground, that there is much demand for what we are still forced to call beauty work on men that the chain devoted exclusively to their needs is imperative.

It's a known fact that one of the most clamored about stage stars of the season, male in gender, has his hair waved regularly. Dozens of others are suspected of the same weekly appointment.

And if you don't think men go in for hair dyeing, just do a little inquiring around among those who are in the know.

And why not, again? Men are just as scared of getting gray as women are—and generally for the same serious reason.

But yesterday a communication came from a man in his late thirties, begging to know where to get his hair dyed or touched up. Out of a job, he found those gray hairs of his no help in securing work. It was not a unique letter nor situation.

And speaking of gray hairs, male or female: Among the clever ruses to hide the silver threads noted are what are called retouch applicators containing a number of different shades to serve as many original toned hair colorings. These are applied either to the few silver threads or to the whole head. Being of vegetable compound and not a dye, they wash off with each shampoo and are cleverly concealing of the telltale hairs.

Personally, we think it a deep pity that gray hair cannot be met with the philosophy due it, but things being as they are and disguises being what they are, why not?

Girl's Actions Mislead Boy; Cause Trouble

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Some of them apparently don't want to be treated as stalwart oaks. Not 'til they get to know you a little better, girls! First time out, and second, they'd just as soon you wouldn't wrap yourself around them like clinging vines.

Well, "Flynn," anyway, is one of the boys who'd like a girl to keep her distance 'til he's had a chance to size her up. It's disturbing to have a girl cling to your arm, straighten your tie and go in for brushing lint off the coat collar before you know her first name.

"A guy doesn't know what kind of sister she is, these days. There was a time when, if a girl got fresh like that, you'd know how to label her. But you can't tell now, as I learned to my sorrow the other night. I thought the dame was working for a little necking so I gave it to her and she turned around and bawled the life out of me.

"I like her, too. I'm sorry I got off on the wrong foot, but hully-gee, how're you to know what to do? You don't want to be taken for a slow moving tortoise when you think you're getting the come-on. Women—they have me stumped—and I like the darned things, which makes it worse. And there isn't anybody'd treat a girl with more respect than I if I knew that's what she wanted."

So, there you go, young ladies! See the plight you can get a boy into who means all right—but isn't going to be set down as a slow poke!

It's fair enough if you bear down heavily on the masculine arm and take an intimate interest in the set of his tie and coat collar that you don't holler if said arm slips a notch in conventional behavior. You've invited it. So, take it—and next time use that arm only when it is offered you respectfully, leaving the tie to straighten itself.

You see, girls, there are just certain behaviorisms that will be read by men in their own language. And we'd suggest that you become a little more conversant with this tongue of theirs just to save yourself embarrassment—and the boy the nice, clean feeling he'd like to have for you.

Tons of Mud Used in War Scene of Film

Overhead Piping Provides a Heavy Rain.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., March 8.—Ten times wetter than Joan Crawford or anybody else got in "Rain" was the fate of 98 men on the "Fellow Prisoners" set at Warner-First National studio, where German officers and prison camp guards marched 87 allied prisoners through ankle deep mud to their jail barracks.

It was a lucky day for Leslie Howard, young Doug Fairbanks, Paul Lukas, and Philip Faversham, for they were not called into the scene where tons of water above and tons of mud below mingled to give the most dismal of surroundings for a movie shot. The 98, all of them among the highest grade extras, tramped and sloshed through the downpour up and down a little hill, time and again until the Australian troopers in the ranks could wring more than a gallon of water out of their campaign hats and every bit of clothing that peeled off was not merely sodden but running with water.

The scene, representing the midnight arrival of newly captured French, British, American, Canadian, and Australian troops of all branches, was dominated by a huge fellow who turned out to be Wilhelm Yetta, former officer in the kaiser's heavy artillery and now not only an actor but technical director for Sir Philip Gibbs' story.

Frank Reicher was another German officer and so were Ivan Linow, the Russian wrestler, and Reginald Pasch, Hollywood character actor. A sprinkling of other ex-German officers clicked their heels and saw to it that the former American, Canadian, British, and French soldiers who were the "prisoners" did a little heel clicking themselves.

I counted thirteen authentic war uniforms in the shot, and on inquiring learned that it was necessary to use a shift of five ton dump trucks working for days to bring in enough loam and clay to lay out the simulation of a battlefield. A goodly fraction of one mile of overhead piping was required to provide the downpour which the actors gloomily say they have been taught to expect for the next twelve days of film work.

Gertrude and Helen Keeler, sisters of Ruby [Mrs. Al Johlson], visited Miss Keeler at Warner studio all day while she was outfitting for "Gold Diggers of 1933." There are still two other Keeler sisters, but their turn to visit Ruby comes next week.

Two ex-Irish revolutionaries are working in the same cast at Warners—Gordon Westcott, who was born a Utah Mormon and found himself fighting for De Valera one day, and George Brent, who was an Irish republican dispatch bearer to Glasgow and found it healthy to migrate to America when the British soldiers took after him.

Business Men Hear Women Tell Success

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The Chicago Association of Commerce gained a few pointers on the successes of women in business yesterday when they met with the Alliance of Business and Professional Women in a joint luncheon at the Hotel La Salle. The luncheon was in observance of national business women's week.

Kathleen McLaughlin, TRIBUNE reporter, was one of the women speakers. Choosing "Sob Sisters" as her subject, Miss McLaughlin intimated that women's reportorial duties no longer are relegated to that field exclusively. She named a number of women writers known nationally and internationally for their able coverage of economic and political subjects, working alongside men on an equal basis.

More than 60,000 members of the National Business and Professional Women's clubs stand ready to work with the men in meeting the present situation, "the greatest challenge to America," Mrs. Geline Bowman of Richmond, Va., national president, declared.

Miss Genevieve Forsberg, president of the Chicago alliance, quoted statistics from the United States department of labor revealing that 11,000,000 women over 16 years of age are employed in 527 occupations. But 84 per cent are concentrated, she said, in 24 occupations. About 85 per cent of all women working in this country, she added, are supporting one dependent each.

Other speakers included Mary D. Bailey, assistant United States district attorney, who discussed narcotics, and Olivia B. Strohm, dean of women in advertising.

'Have You Any Money?' Gets to Be Tiresome

Society Is Talking a Lot About Crisis.

BY JUDITH CASS.

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things,
"Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—
"Of cabbages—and kings—
"And why the sea is boiling hot
"And whether pigs have wings."

And that's just the way this society editor feels, what with all the talk about the moratorium and scrip and new currency and so on and so forth. It's not hard to keep from being excited and alarmed when every one is "in the same boat" and all are so cheerful and optimistic and are meeting the situation with the same courage and faith that they have been showing in the face of adversity for the last two or three years, but it is tiresome to have every one ask the same question, "How much cash have you?"

What difference does it make yet? Shortage of cash isn't a new experience to many and those who are finding it a new experience have credit, so they can live just as they usually do, so "what's all the shootin' for?"

Some who had planned to leave this week for trips have had to postpone them, but no one should mind that at a time like this, and as far as we can make out no one does.

Banker's Wife Late at Luncheon

We saw a banker's wife yesterday and it was a joy to hear her explain why she was late to luncheon. "I had to find one of our white mice," she said, "and it took me nearly an hour to locate the little scamp." We knew her one and only son was away at school and our first thought was "what an accommodating mother, to look after the boy's pets while he is away," but she went on and explained that the two little rodents belong to her and her husband and that the mice provide enough amusement in these times of stress to more than make up for the trouble they cause, particularly when the mice escape, and ofttimes a search of the ten room

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess, while marooned in a catboat on Peconic bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville, meets a girl in a canoe who lives on a nearby island. Bart learns that she is one of the Bayleys, who have lived in seclusion on the island fifteen years. The father traveled. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. He confesses in a letter left for Bart to being a bigamist. The Bayleys of Folly island are his second family. They know him as Matthew Bayley. He asks Bart, for his invalid mother's sake, to guard the secret, and leaves a fortune to provide for the Bayleys. Bart calls on Mrs. Bayley, posing as a lawyer, and finds her a lovely woman. She tells him, in confidence, that Alice isn't Matthew Bayley's daughter. When Bart realizes he loves Alice he resolves to stay away from Folly island. He becomes engaged to Lora Sackett, a distant relative and recent divorcee. The Bayleys visit New York and Bart sees them. Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," has invited Alice to Wyattville. Bart tells Alice of his engagement. Alice and her mother are guests of the Warrens for the annual Wyattville flowers show. Mrs. Burgess has the Bayleys in for tea. Alice sees a photograph of Trevor Burgess. Bart suspects his Aunt Augusta and Ingy Warren of stumbling on his father's secret and inviting the Bayleys to Wyattville to expose it. Mrs. Constance Farnham is included in the intrigue. Bart calls on her. He learns that Mrs. Bayley was married to her son, who was killed shortly after in an accident, and that Alice is his daughter. Alice and her mother leave Wyattville and Bart is unable to learn their whereabouts. Lora, who realizes Bart loves Alice, has gone to New York to visit a friend.

INSTALLMENT XLVI.

REPORTING TO MOMMA.

Bart thought of the simplest of all expedients, to write Alice a letter. But where should he send it? To Folly island? It might lie there for weeks. The Bayleys might never return to Folly island; they must both of them have been in a desperate frame of mind when they quit Wyattville so suddenly. Bart considered. He might go out to Folly island again. But that would take a day of time, and there were so few days left——

He found himself turning his car back toward Wyattville. Lora should be home by now; and at the risk of quarreling with her again, he must ask some questions. Some sixth sense seemed to be guiding him toward her at that moment, as though her voice had called to him out of thin air, hinting at a solution.

Viola, never failing in her capacity to be dramatic, cautiously opened the door of Mrs. Lind's cottage, then sprang back as though a black cat had crossed her path.

"O, Mister Burgess," she giggled, "it's yew. Won't you come in, Mister Burgess?"

She was overcordial, acting the hostess.

"Is Mrs. Sackett back yet?" he inquired.

"No, Mister Burgess. But Mrs. Lind, she's home."

He didn't want to see Mrs. Lind, but it was too late now to retreat.

"I don't see how I'll ever get through with it all," she complained.

Somewhere from within he could hear her strangely melancholy voice calling him.

"O, Bart! Is that you? Do come in, Bart."

He found her standing in a chaos of renovation; her hair was untidy, her sleeves rolled back; she looked hot and tired. Workmen who had been redecorating the two front rooms, preparatory to a home wedding, were carrying away pieces of scaffolding. The little woman seemed so rumpled and wild; she was unused to housework, and this extra expense must have been a great burden for her to carry.

"Don't you need another helper?" asked Bart, somehow sorry for her as he kissed the cheek she offered.

"I don't see how I'll ever get through with it all," she complained. "Presents are coming in from everywhere. People are being so nice." Puffing, tired, she seemed scarcely to know what she was saying. "Bart, have you seen the lovely tea service the Sadlers sent her?"

"They always come across." Dully he followed her into the pantry and saw the jumble of silver and porcelain and unidentified what-you-call-ums, piled to the ceiling, stacked in every corner. Duly he admired the Sadlers' tribute, piece by piece. His eye lit on a cocktail churn, solid silver and twice as large as the frivolous glass one that had proved his undoing.

"I'll bet Ingy sent that one," he ventured.

"No. Colonel and Mrs. Warren."

"All in the family."

But suddenly Mrs. Lind faced him, panting, undone, disheveled by the dirty work of the last few days. Her weak little mouth was quivering strangely.

"Bart, do you know when Lora's coming home?"

"Lora?" He frowned, puzzled. "She told me she was coming back today—on the early train. But hasn't she telephoned?"

"Not a word since she left. Bart, she was going to have two dresses sent out by special delivery. They didn't come. I've 'phoned her dressmakers, and she hasn't been in. She was going to stay in Elsie Pritchard's apartment while Elsie was in Pittsburgh. Bart, I'm so worried——"

"Didn't you get Elsie's apartment?"

"Yes." Mrs. Lind was holding on to herself with all her tiny will. "Some strange woman answered the phone and said that Lora—Lora hadn't been back last night."

Queer, queer people, these women. Alice in hiding somewhere—and now Lora.

"Probably she's decided to go to a hotel and didn't take the trouble to let you know. Lora's that way sometimes," he told her unconvincingly.

"She's been so strange lately." Mrs. Lind stood appealing to him with her little round eyes. She was wondering how far she could go without offending him. "Bart, has there been anything——"

Then she stiffened and turned toward the pantry door. "What is it now, Viola?" Viola was smirking there, drama in her very bones.

"Miss Lora's on the phone, Mrs. Lind."

"O, of course." It was plain to see that his future mother-in-law was already regretting her candor. "Wasn't it silly of me!"

She rushed out toward the telephone, somewhere in the rear of the front hall. As he stood in the pantry, inanely smoking and wondering how long Mrs. Lind's unimportant worry would keep him there, Bart could hear her voice, hushed to a confidential key, but dinging, dinging away at some favorite quarrel. Then, "It's very silly of you. And what do you expect to do? Yes, he's here now. Wait a minute."

He saw Mrs. Lind come to the center of her drawing room and stand in the midst of the rubbish which the decorators had left behind. Her little body seemed to be shaking to pieces, her fingers were plucking aimlessly at her rolled back sleeves.

"Anything wrong?" he asked, coming out of the pantry.

"Bart," she said feebly, "Lora's holding the wire. She wants to speak to you."

Then she sat heavily on a packing case.

That morning, replete with breakfast, Lora stood in the shallow foyer of the Ritz, fussily straightening Ingy Warren's gaudy new tie.

"Now, Dish Face," she said amiably, "it's time for you to scram back to Wyattville and report to Momma."

"You've got a momma, too," he reminded her; this morning he seemed to be a much reduced Ingy Warren. "Maybe we've made enough trouble for twenty-four hours and we'd both better go home."

"I'm telling you this time," she insisted, and the red line of her lips was suddenly firm. "You hop right into that murder car of yours and start rapidly east."

"But when'll you be out?"

"After a while. I've got things to do. If I told you you'd get a sick headache. I'll be seeing you. Oodle!"

Her bracelets were clanging as Ingy took his obedient way into Madison avenue.

But standing there, considering, she was no longer the comic Lora. Wyattville's rough little satirist. In spite of the rouge, her face looked pale, and her hand was unsteady as she lit a cigaret.

I won't spoil my day with a lot of brainstorms, she was thinking. If he never knows, that's all right by me. It isn't what he thinks of me. It's what I can give him; what he really, truly has——

As close to life philosophy as Lora, in her restless fluttering among light thrills, ever allowed herself to go. Now she was out on the street, ordering a taxicab, impressing the man with the number of a studio building where Elsie Pritchard lived a free life, pretending to paint.

Books Foster the City Child's Love of Nature

They Stimulate His Interest and Observation.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"He is simply passionate in his love of the country," said a woman whose family live in a large city, but who manages by hook or crook to get them away in the summer. It was said with an almost mournful air of regret that she was not a country dweller.

"I know," said her friend, "so are mine. That's one nice thing about city children—they adore the country so," she added brightly.

The first woman opened her eyes. Her rueful expression changed to one of surprise. "Why, that's so," she said.

As a matter of fact, all country children don't know a great deal about the natural world they live in. Some educator made the statement the other day that in spite of the fact that so many children live in cities, the boys and girls of today as a whole know more about the country and how to live in it, about animal life and lore, and natural laws than children ever have before.

I believe that is true. Certainly it is true as far as my own experience and observation are concerned. I think children on the whole have a much more intelligent love of nature than they ever had before.

Some of this has been fostered by older people who know what a need and satisfaction it is to children. Camp life has helped, too. And the really splendid books that are being written for young people of all ages do two things; they supply the information which few children have the opportunity to get by first hand observation, and they stimulate the children's interest in watching and discovering for themselves and checking up with the book.

As a result of many outdoor adventures with children I have found out first hand which books of those on the market present their information in an interesting way. We have two lists now, the earlier one, called "Books of the Outdoor World" and a later one called "The Young Naturalist's Book List." Since each is a double sheet leaflet it will be necessary to send a stamped self-addressed envelope for each—or double postage. March is the month when things begin to happen in field and stream, in woods and ponds, so don't wait too long to supply your young people with handbooks or reference books on the outdoor world.

Movie Closeup

Evelyn Brent came to call yesterday afternoon.

If you've liked her on the screen—and most of you have—you'll be delighted to learn that she's just as snappy looking in street clothes as she is when dolled up for the camera, and a charming person to meet. She is spontaneous and unaffected, bubbling over with gay and kindly gossip of Hollywood, Hollywoodians and folks she's been meeting on her vaudeville tour, and merrily philosophical over the moratorium situation which has brought her as well as the rest of us some embarrassing moments.

Miss Brent is of medium height, slim and dark. She wears no rouge, but goes in for rather dark lip coloring that is repeated on her shining nails. She was trim in a dark blue suit, silver fox fur and little red felt hat well down over one glowing brown eye. Smart as anything!

I asked her where on earth she'd been hiding, and she replied that the sort of rôles she plays—you know, deadly, sophisticated, rapier in stocking portrayals—hadn't been plentiful lately owing to much censorship of underworld pictures. Did she like vaudeville?

"I like it," she said, "but it scares me to death. My first experience, you know! I have a little muff that I keep my hands in so I can clench 'em—and so I get by all right—but I DO have a time not looking at the audience. They told me I must just look into the spotlight, you know."

I DIDN'T know. But then there are more things about personal appearances that I DON'T know than you could put in a hat. I'd die if I had to make one, myself.

Miss Brent opens at the Palace Friday in a skit called, I believe, "Bright Fooling." Something of the kind.

'Have You Any Money?' Gets to Be Tiresome

Society Is Talking a Lot About Crisis.

apartment on Lake Shore drive has to be made before they are discovered.

They weren't bought to be house pets, but to be presented as "booby" prizes in a card game, but the wife of the winner wouldn't let him take them home, said wife being Mrs. Samuel T. Chase. So the Louis K. Boysens had to keep them, and now they are really very glad that Mrs. Chase doesn't like white mice!

"I'll give you Dotty's I. O. U. for 90 cents and one of my own for 60 cents, and that will make the $1.50 I owe you," explains the loser of the contract foursome to one of those to whom she owes money, and thus goes the conversation when settling up time comes after card games these days.

None of the young women who habitually play contract several afternoons a week wants to part with any cash, so since Sunday they have been giving promises to pay when the banks are open to the winners, and some I. O. U.s have been tucked away into as many as three or four handbags since they were written, and already they are as soiled and dog-eared as paper money is after it has been in circulation for months.

Mrs. Sidney Heap Learns to Market

Mrs. Sidney Heap, not long back from a wedding trip abroad, is learning how to market from her mother, Mrs. George E. Skinkle, and every morning bright and early they are out, visiting the stores near the Whitehall, where the Heaps are living until they find a house in the country.

Mrs. J. Ogden Armour had planned to leave next Monday for a late winter sojourn in Phoenix, but yesterday she said that, like every one else, her plans are unsettled and she hasn't the faintest idea whether she will be able to go on Monday or have to postpone her trip. Her son-in-law and daughter, the John J. Mitchells, had expected to go to New York today just to stay until Sunday, but they, too, have postponed their trip and have no plans for leaving the city until banking affairs are more settled.

The junior Frederick M. Algers have postponed the glamorous trip they were to have started early this month, and instead of exploring the ruins of Yucatan they are "sitting tight" in Detroit and waiting for more settled times before they leave on such an adventure. Mrs. Alger is the former Suzette Dewey of Chicago.

The James Ward Thornes had to postpone their trip to Yucatan last month on account of the "flu" germ which attacked Mrs. Thorne, and they had hoped to go around this time, but they have given up all idea of making the trip now.

Business as Usual at Clubs

Detroit has been bank holidaying long enough so that cash really is scarce there, and a letter from there yesterday told about how every one who belonged to a club and was in good standing was having as many meals as possible there, where his credit was good, so immediately we thought to ourselves, "Our smart Chicago clubs will be experiencing a boom," but we were wrong, for apparently the shortage in cash isn't acute enough yet to make any one use his clubs more than usual.

The Casino, Saddle and Cycle, Woman's Athletic, Fortnightly, Arts and Tavern clubs all report "business as usual; no better, no worse." The Tavern, however, is planning unusual gayety for next week, for on Thursday, March 16, it will give an after playgoing supper party for those delightful Irish players who are being entertained so much during their engagement here.

That will not be the first supper party the Irish players will enjoy at the Tavern, however, for tonight some of the prominent members of the Irish Fellowship club of Chicago are entertaining the talented stage folk at the club.

The Arts club, which, unlike most clubs, does not have charge accounts ordinarily, is charging luncheons and teas during the moratorium, or 'accepting checks for the amount of the bill (no change or cashing checks, however, of course) if a member is pinched for cash.

Yesterday Mrs. Byron S. Harvey had a party of nine at luncheon for Mrs. Henry P. Davison, who is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Fowler McCormick, among the guests being Mrs. Samuel Insull Jr., Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Princess Rostislav, and Mrs. McCormick, of course.

The club already has more than a hundred reservations for the musical and supper to be given Sunday night. Ada MacLeish (Mrs. Archibald) and Jacques Gordon are to give the program.

This afternoon members of the Fortnightly club will hear Maude Radford Warren speak about "Ireland Again at the Crossroads" at one of the regular meetings, and as usual there will be a luncheon and tea before and after the meeting.

Another Lenten lecture course. At the Woman's Athletic club on Tuesday mornings at 11 o'clock, for three successive weeks, starting on March 21. Mrs. Anthony French Merrill will talk on "New Books and New Affairs."

In the same envelope was an announcement of an illustrated lecture on "Shades of Our Ancestors," by Alice Van Leer Carrick, next Thursday at 11 o'clock.

The Council on Foreign Relations thinks no one will want to spare a dollar and a half for a luncheon meeting Saturday, so it is postponing the one scheduled for this week until the next month, when the speaker, Stephen Duggan of the Institute for International Education, will be out here from New York again. The tentative date is April 29.

Academy boys out in Lake Forest are to have their first lessons in banking this week-end when they entertain at their annual winter house parties. To meet the cash shortage Headmaster John Wayne Richards has decided on issuing "L. F. A." scrip, and it will be good Friday and Saturday for ice cream at the school book store, basketball tickets at the gym store, or theater tickets at the offices of the Gargoyle Players.

The week-end promises to be a round of gayety, beginning with a tea and reception at the Richards' house Friday afternoon and ending with a midnight dance Saturday.

Former Martha Stibolt Sails.

The Baron and Baroness Wolfgang Beck von Pecos sailed last night at midnight on the Hamburg for Hamburg, and they are going directly from that port to Munich, where they are going to live. The baroness is the former Martha Morse Stibolt. Her mother, Mrs. Charles Hosmer Morse, has just returned from a trip to Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Younglove have moved into the Roland T. Hastings' garage-apartment on Dale avenue in Highland Park which the John B. Wings have been occupying. Mrs. Younglove is the former Dorothy Reay, daughter of the William M. Reays of Highland Park and her husband's parents are the James C. Younglove who live in Glencoe in a lovely English tudor house on Sheridan road.

Mrs. Frances Glessner Lee of Lake Shore drive has gone to Farmington, Conn., to visit her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson have gone to Pinehurst, N. C., to visit Mr. Stevenson's mother, who has taken a house down there. Mrs. Stevenson went down from Washington and her husband joined her there.

Miss Mary S. West, chairman of the library committee of the Alliance Française will give a talk in French on "Books in the Rooms of the Alliance Library" this afternoon at the weekly causerie at the Alliance.

Mrs. Andrew R. Sherriff, soprano, and Miss Virginia Knapp, pianist, will be the artists at the tiffin musical this morning at 11 o'clock at the Cradle, 2039 Ridge avenue, Evanston. The Cornelius M. Trowbridge, whose son, Cornelius M. Trowbridge Jr., is to exhibit his oil paintings for the first time, is coming over to pour at the tea with Mrs. Logan T. McMenemy.

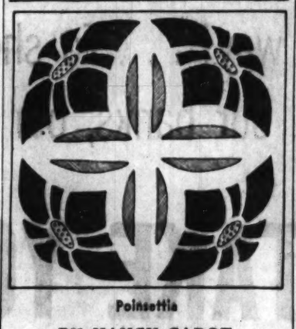

Supplementing Mr. Trowbridge's hangings in Reed hall will be an arts and crafts exhibit by the students. Fred Wacker, whose grandfather was the well known Charles H. Wacker, is to show caricatures of prominent persons.

Engagement Told

Miss Virginia Honnold, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred C. Honnold of Winnetka, whose engagement to Leslie E. Houcls has been announced.

'Poinsettia' Is One of Loveliest of Flower Quilts

BY NANCY CABOT.

Almost every flower grown has been portrayed in one way or another in quilt patterns, but the "Poinsettia" was one of the very first so to be immortalized. This particular pattern was brought to this country from Hawaii as early as 1840 by an American missionary. Its life before that time has not been chronicled. But such an attractive design does not need further references for complete adoption by American quilt enthusiasts.

Slightly inflected and curved lines rather than straight and angular figures are the means of achieving the unusually artistic and graceful effect.

For a pattern of this quilt design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street.

It's Flavor That Counts with Onions

Social Disapproval Is No Damper on Popularity.

BY MARY MEADE.

Three million dollars' worth of onions and garlic to build the great pyramid!

That, so reads the inscription on the monument's base, was the measure of the onion appetites of the olden days when strong men needed still stronger food to get the work done properly.

But this penchant for onions was not a weakness of the pharaohs' children alone. The old Romans loved their onions. Onions were one of the foods the Israelites longed for in the wilderness, while many of the eastern nations once showed their esteem by using these odiferous vegetables on their altars.

And today, despite disapproving frowns from society, onions are still as great favorites as ever they were with onion enthusiasts growing even more jubilant to discover their favorites rising to the head of the class among both the money savers and the health boosters. For onions have never been so low in cost, and, especially the virulent raw fellows, they are quite generously supplied with an assortment of vitamins and minerals, both promoters of health.

But after all, the flavor's the thing. And even though you could never be brought to consume a whole onion knowingly, a dash of juice or a brushing over of a cut section in the salad bowl does magical things to the appetite. Many a sauce, soup, stew, and stuffing would languish into pale insignificance if it were not for the saving zest of this old eye watering Egyptian favorite.

Scores of onion glorified possibilities beg to be tried. Onions fried with apples; onions and tomatoes stewed together; onions stuffed with forcemeat and baked about roast beef; steak or liver smothered with onions in the braising pan; creamed onion soup served up with toasted cheese croutons; little button onions boiled and buttered or creamed or glazed; salads garnished with onion rings; and cottage cheese with sparkle lent by minced onion or onion juice.

Or for a rather unusual recipe we haven't heard so much about, try—

FRENCH FRIED ONION RINGS.

Prepare a thin fritter batter made from one cup of flour, two-thirds cup of milk, one-half teaspoon salt, two eggs, and a dash of pepper beaten together. Slice large white onions and separate them into rings. Dip in the batter and then drop into deep, hot fat [380 degrees F.]. Fry until golden brown.

GLAZED ONIONS.

Select small white onions and boil in a generous amount of water from 10 to 15 minutes. Drain and place in a casserole. Mix three tablespoons each of melted butter and sugar till the sugar is dissolved, then add this to the onions. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] for 15 minutes, or until well glazed.

VEAL STUFFED ONIONS.

2-3 cup chopped raw veal.
½ cup bread crumbs.
2 tablespoons fat.
1 tablespoon minced onion.
½ teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
1 egg.
6 thin slices salt pork.
1 cup rich meat stock.
1 teaspoon beef extract.

Combine the veal, bread crumbs, two tablespoons of fat, egg, minced onion and seasoning. Peel the onions and hollow out part of the insides, leaving good, firm walls. Drop into boiling water and cook for five minutes. Drain and stuff with the forcemeat. Now arrange the thin pieces of salt pork on the bottom of a baking dish and place a stuffed onion on each. Pour around this the stock and bake till the onions are tender [about half an hour] in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.].

Transfer the onions to a hot platter, skim off the fat from the broth, and add the beef extract seasoning, and a little fresh butter. Pour at once over the onions.

Brown and Beige Is Favorite for Paris Evenings

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Day and evening fashions have been trying to pool their interests for a long time. We have long sleeved evening gowns and ankle length afternoon dresses as an evidence of this joining of forces. We now have evening hats. Evening gowns that haven't low necks and daytime dresses that have are part of this merger.

Jean Patou, who has done a lot to pool day and evening clothes designed the ensemble illustrated today in this cause. It is one of the smartest in Paris, and in the new day-evening color scheme of beige and brown. The medium length cloak is made of brown velveteen, with the shoulder yoke and the puffs at the top of the sleeves cut in one piece. The collar combines collar and butterfly bow, which is placed at the back of the neck. The cutaway closing of this coat is smart.

The beige crêpe silk frock that goes with it has two panels at the front of the skirt, which begin at the nipline. The plain bodice is high in front and draped in a cowl. It has wide shoulder straps made of natural pheasant feathers that begin at the shoulders in front and extend to the waistline in a V in back ending in a feather fringe as shown in the small sketch.

Sir Basil Blackett Urges Index System.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

[Financial Editor of The Chicago Tribune.]

"Planned Money," by Sir Basil Blackett. [Appleton.]

In view of the current interest in such things as money, gold and inflation, "Planned Money" by Sir Basil P. Blackett should attract much reader interest.

Sir Basil is particularly well qualified to write on this subject because he is a director of the Bank of England. Great Britain has had about eighteen months' experience with managed currency, having gone off the gold standard in September, 1931.

This very fact, however, will put the erudite reader somewhat on his guard, for there will lurk in his mind the suspicion that what Sir Basil says may be consciously or unconsciously influenced by his position as an important financial leader in a nation committed—not through choice—to a managed currency.

The essence of Sir Basil's plan is the establishment and maintenance of a constant price level through the governmental control of currency in each nation. A world price level he discards as impossible of attainment under present conditions.

"The ideal which is being sought after is a local currency that will provide a measure of value which can be spoken of as a yardstick without the metaphor being hopelessly overstrained, a currency of which the purchasing power will remain stable from year to year and from decade to decade, so that the money value in a money contract entered into for a long period, such as a life insurance policy or a mortgage or a subscription to a government loan, may represent the same purchasing power over commodities throughout the period of the contract.

"This ideal would be most nearly realized if stability could be attained in some index number which adequately measured the sum of all the most important activities of the economic life of the nation."

But, he admits, potatoes will be cheaper in some towns than in others even with a so-called constant price level, for retail prices must always depend upon a multitude of factors, including cost of transportation and source of supply.

The money planners' job under a planned money regime would be too complicated, Sir Basil concedes, to make it possible for them to force grocers in London to sell onions at the same price at which onions would be selling at Coventry. Their task would be rather to keep the general averages of all commodity prices stabilized.

"There must be some allowance," he writes, "for differences in costs of transport according to distance from the source of supply and from the markets, and even if eggs might conceivably be sold at the same price all the year around, fresh strawberries must be cheaper in the middle of the strawberry season than just at its beginning."

Sir Basil dresses up his dissertation on the advantages of planned money with chapters explaining such things as bimetallism, the international gold standard and international lending.

The present money and price system, he insists, is at the bottom of the world's current economic ills.

"It is only because of the complications introduced by money," he says, "that the modern world finds itself continually puzzled and too often tortured by fluctuations in the relations between a given quantity of its measure of value, money, and the amount of human satisfaction represented by a given aggregate of all the kinds of goods and services which it is accustomed to bring to market. For that is what fluctuations in the general level of prices mean."

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIPLEY

THE AFFAIR AT HOLLOW EYED GULCH.

After ten years' absence, Prof. Fordney stepped from the train at Cold Water Junction. He was greeted by a noisy and enthusiastic Sheriff Gill.

"You old son-of-a-gun, Joe," he shouted. "Derned if it ain't good to see you again."

Five miles out as they rambled along in Gill's old Ford, a horse and rider flew past them. Fordney coughed, waved away the dust with his hat, and shook his head.

"Reminds me of the cock-eyed case you worked on when you were my deputy," Gill chuckled. "The murder of 'Nobs' Gunthrie."

"Laugh, you old hoss-face," retorted his guest good-naturedly. "It had you stumped! Doesn't seem ten years ago, does it? Remember? The only clew we had was the single tracks of a horse leaving Gunthrie's ranch and leading into Hollow Eyed Gulch."

"I recollect it all right. And how you trailed those hoss prints and went over every inch of the ground only to find they ended abruptly at the gulch."

"Poor old 'Scuffy,' mused the professor. "How I put him on the pan when, in spite of everything, he insisted that he saw 'Swanson gallopin' like hell' TOWARD Gunthrie's FROM the gulch just before the murder was committed. And the only marks on the trail were the one set of hoss prints going in the OPPOSITE DIRECTION!"

"I can still see you, Joe," the sheriff interrupted, "sitting on that stump in the sage brush by the side of the road muttering to yourself, 'Now, supposin' I was Gunthrie's murderer . . .' Then, when you jumped up and dashed over to Gunthrie's bunkhouse and arrested Pete Swanson, even I thought you were crazy when Pete proved he hadn't left the ranch after the murder!"

BANISH toilet odors!

A LITTLE Sani-Flush takes the place of scrubbing and scouring toilets. Its action is quick and positive. Odors can't stay where Sani-Flush is. Stains and streaks go. The hidden trap, where no brush can reach, is purified.

Sprinkle a little Sani-Flush in the toilet bowl (follow directions on the can). Flush the toilet—and down go germs and odors. The porcelain glistens like new. Sani-Flush can't harm plumbing.

At grocery, drug and hardware stores, 25c. (Another use for Sani-Flush—cleaning automobile radiators. See directions on can.)

Richer in theol—this tea Sways the Senses

AMONG the sophisticated peoples of the Orient, tea is the chosen beverage. Because it stirs the senses . . . quickens the emotional pulse . . . awakens feeling . . . without any later, unfavorable reaction.

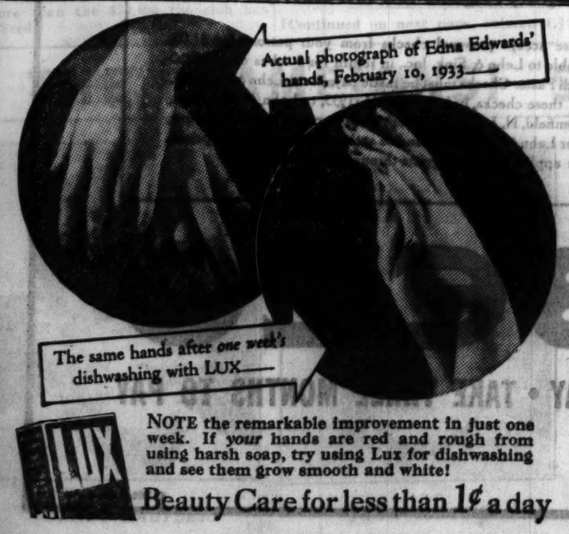

To get the best from tea, it is necessary that you choose a tea rich in theol. This is a fragrant oil carrying the flavor.

Chase & Sanborn's Tender Leaf Tea contains more theol than any but the most expensive blends. Its tender leaves are picked only during the dry season—when they are at the peak of flavor and effectiveness.

Your grocer has this tea in quarter-pound and half-pound screw-top canisters.

JAPANESE BOMB CHINESE FLEEING TOWARD PEIPING

Jehol Governor Reported Captured and Slain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, March 8.—After a six hour battle, their most active and stubborn resistance since the Japanese invasion of Jehol province began on New Year's day, the Chinese gave up Koupeikow pass at noon today and began a retreat to Peiping, 65 miles to the southwest.

The crack 16th Japanese infantry brigade, under Gen. Tadashi Kawahara, rested at Koupeikow after its victory. Although Japanese bombing planes harassed the retreating Chinese, the Japanese turned their attention to installing garrisons in all the passes through the Great Wall—for 250 miles from Mongolia to the sea—which the Chinese built in 300 B. C. as a defense against Tartar invasion.

Delay March on Peiping.

No immediate thrust at Peiping was apparent, although it is expected if Japan decides the lives of its nationals in that city are in danger. Among the many foreigners in Peiping are about 700 American civilians and 544 marines.

Until Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese dictator, arrives at Peiping from Hankow the area is temporarily leaderless. Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, commander of the Jehol defense forces, resigned today, accepting blame for loss of the province.

Gen. Tang-Yu-lin, fleeing governor of Jehol, was reported taken prisoner and executed by Chinese soldiers at Ksifengkow pass, where the Lwan river cuts through the wall.

Chang Admits Failure.

Marshal Chang, who is only 35 years old, and who inherited the warlordship of Manchuria when his father, Chang Tso-lin, was assassinated in 1928, lost his heritage after the Japanese seizure of Mukden on Sept. 18, 1931. He was driven out of Manchuria four months later. He was made vice commander of Chinese national forces and was entrusted with defense of Jehol. He was severely criticized for negligence in letting the Japanese capture Shanhaikwan on Jan. 3, 1933, and for his inadequate defense of Jehol. He directed the Jehol defense from Peiping. Marshal Chang's resignation said:

"After the loss of the three eastern provinces, I tried my best to remedy my faults, but the fall of Jehol convinced me I am unfit to keep command. I have not fulfilled my duties to the government and my responsibilities to the people.

Report Tang Has Much Gold.

"In the last months I met with many difficulties and unexpected developments occurred. If I remain in office one more day, I will be blamed still more. Even if I die, my death would be of no advantage to the government nor would it improve the situation. Therefore, I ask the government to allow me to resign as a sign of its dissatisfaction and to appoint a capable successor."

Gen. Tang Yu-lin, the central figure in Jehol, was reputed to possess many wives and much gold derived from the sale of opium. After the Mukden incident, Gov. Tang was listed as a supporter of Manchukuo, but in the recent campaign he was considered a leader of the Chinese defense. With the approach of the Japanese to Jehol City, he fled and Chinese ordered his arrest.

CHILDREN SAVED BY U. S. WOMAN IN JAPANESE RAID

JEHOL CITY, March 8.—(AP)—The only American in Jehol, Miss Harriet F. Minns, a mission worker from Buffalo, N. Y., was a heroine during the capture of Lingyuan on March 1.

After Japanese airmen had dropped warnings to foreigners that they must evacuate or else seek bombproof shelters, Miss Minns, with her British coworkers, made two American flags by hand.

When the bombing started one flag was hoisted over the mission building and the other was spread over the underground shelter which Miss Minns had previously prepared. To this dugout the American marched the Chinese children who were under her care.

Japan Buys 2 More British and 2 Canadian Vessels

LONDON, March 8.—(AP)—Japan bought two British and two Canadian ships today, bringing to nine the number of vessels it has purchased since the outbreak of hostilities in Jehol province. The ships purchased today were the Peninsular ond Oriental line's 6,000 ton Padua, the Glen line's Glenshane, of 6,498 tons; the 5,497 ton Canadian Inventor, and the 5,384 ton Canadian Mariner.

BRITISH RECORDS REVEAL 'SALE' OF HONORS PERSISTS

Police Finally Nab the 'Man of Mystery.'

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 8.—Widespread traffic in promises to obtain titles goes on in Britain. Scotland Yard records contain many notes of complaints by persons who have actually paid over money in the belief that they could obtain a knighthood, baronetcy, or a peerage.

There is, however, no evidence that any one has received such an honor on payment of a fee. Most titles awarded in England are conferred for distinguished public service. But outstanding achievements in any field are recognized in the same way, and even generous donations to charity often bring a place in one of the numerous orders as a reward.

Party Wheelhorses Rewarded.

Nominally the title is the grant of King George, and is conferred by him in person. Various party governments, however, see that valuable supporters obtain honors, and in some cases the house of lords becomes a respectable place of retirement for old party wheelhorses who go there after they have outlived their usefulnss in campaigns or in the house of commons.

These rewards are obvious enough and are publicly recognized as such. But many people persist in the belief that a title can be obtained by a fat bribe. What agents pretending to have inside influence can charge is shown in the conviction of one Maundy Gregory, a man of mystery, who was seized by police after promising a title for the sum of $50,000.

Gregory is a riddle. He was the confidant of dethroned monarchs after the war, some of whom he is said to have supported with heavy loans. Peers and high governmental officials appeared to be his friends. Members of both the commons and the house of lords were visitors at his office.

Peddles Honor for $50,000.

Gregory approached Lieutenant Commander Edward Leake, D. S. O., who has retired from the British navy, through a third party. A meeting was arranged and Gregory put his proposition. He promised Commander Leake an honor for $50,000 in the king's birthday list this summer. He added that $60,000 would make it even easier.

Commander Leake informed the police and Gregory was arrested under the honors (prevention of abuses) act of 1925. At the second hearing of his trial he changed his plea to guilty and was sentenced to an imprisonment of two months. He was also fined $250 and ordered to pay $250 costs.

Police testified during the trial that many similar complaints had reached them involving Gregory.

He was known as the publisher of a magazine called the Whitehall Gazette. He had a sumptuous office in Whitehall, midway between the houses of parliament and the prime minister's official residence in Downing street. The door was guarded by a uniformed attendant with the letters "W. G." entwined in such a way as to suggest the insignia on the tunics of government messengers.

Gregory was always seen at Ascot, most fashionable of all the British race tracks, and his associations seemed to take him into the most select circles in Britain.

TAX APPEALS BOARD OPENS HEARINGS ON REALTY ASSESSMENT

Fred W. Brummel and George F. Nixon, members of the board of tax appeals, yesterday opened their hearings of objections to the 1931 real estate assessed valuations by granting reductions to 40 of 47 objecting residents of New Trier township who appeared before them. Most of the changes were small, according to the board members, the one exception being the reduction granted Edward B. Hall, 335 White Oak lane, Winnetka, whose assessed valuation was cut to $4,991 from $24,386. It was explained that a decimal error in calculating the value of the property had been made in the assessor's office.

County Judge Jarecki announced that he will extend until March 20 the term during which taxpayers may present evidence to substantiate objections to 1928, 1929, and 1930 taxes.

Louis T. Orr, representing the Chicago Real Estate board, argued before Commissioner Barnet Hodes of the state tax commission yesterday for an opportunity for objectors to 1928, 1929, and 1930 real estate tax valuations to get an adjudication of their tax bills.

A total of $842,839 was collected in 1931 real estate taxes at the county treasurer's office during the day. The office will remain open today and tomorrow from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

WOMAN, 51, HELD ON CHARGES OF CHURCH FRAUD

Miss Gertrude R. Ives, 51 years old, who is charged with defrauding members of the Edgewater Presbyterian church with a plan to publish a church year book, was held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $30,000 by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan on six charges of operating a confidence game. Miss Annette Heinebach, secretary of the Edgewater church, said that church officials had approved Miss Ives' idea to publish the year book, sponsored by the church, at her expense. Then Miss Heinebach testified, Miss Ives induced her and her sister, Miss Gertrude Heinebach, to put up $1,500 for a third partnership in the project. Other members of the church were also induced to invest money, the state charged.

Taken to Hospital with Bullet Wound in His Leg

Stanley Madro, 32 years old, of 1272 Augusta street, was taken to the Bridewell hospital this morning suffering from a bullet wound in his leg. His condition is critical from loss of blood. Police said they believe he was shot by John Macholaski, 943 North Racine avenue. Macholaski said he fired two shots through the door at a man who was hammering on it. Macholaski is prosecuting another man for assault to murder and has been beset, he says, by friends of the man who want the prosecution dropped. Madro is said to be a friend of the man being prosecuted.

GREECE FINISHES THREE DAY WHIRL; ACCEPTS WINNER

Tsaldaris Instructed to Form Cabinet.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, March 8.—Greek politics today completed the circle started by the parliamentary elections last Sunday. President Alexander Zaimis called in Panayoti Tsaldaris, leader of the victorious Royalist party, and instructed him to form a government. The cabinet probably will be completed Friday.

Thus, after swinging from a parliamentary government by Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, anti-Royalist, to a military dictatorship by Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, then to a mixed civilian and military régime with Gen. Othonaios as premier, all in three days, Greece was back on the threshold of normal parliamentary rule.

Each Man Wins a Point.

Formation of a government by Tsaldaris was reported agreeable to Gen. Othonaios, who explained yesterday he took over the government from Gen. Plastiras simply to bring order out of the political chaos. It is also assumed that Venizelos will refrain from stirring any rebellion as he not only disapproved of the dictatorships, but tolerated Tsaldaris as head of the government last fall after he promised allegiance to the republic.

Police have been unable to find Gen. Plastiras, whose arrest was ordered yesterday by Gen. Othonaios. Frontier guards have been instructed to be on the lookout for him.

One Day Dictatorship.

Gen. Plastiras gave as his reason for establishing a dictatorship on the day after the election his desire to prevent Tsaldaris from becoming premier. Professing to believe that this purpose had been achieved, he resigned in favor of Gen. Othonaios after one day in the saddle, then disappeared.

The previous Tsaldaris government held on until mid-January, then, because of weak support, was forced out by Venizelists who gave up Monday noon.

WIFE IS GRANTED A DIVORCE FROM C. R. WALGREEN JR.

Judge Francis B. Allegretti yesterday granted Mrs. Mary Lake Walgreen, 8910 South Hamilton avenue, a divorce in the Superior court from Charles R. Walgreen Jr., whose father controls the drug store chain.

Mrs. Walgreen received a "substantial" property settlement in lieu of alimony, her attorney, Leonard C. Reid, told the court. She was given permission to resume her maiden name, Mary June Lake. She is the step-daughter of W. O. Cooke, former vice president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois.

Mrs. Walgreen charged cruelty, testifying that her husband struck her once at the bridge table, and twisted her arm and threw her against a door on Feb. 27, the date of their separation. They were married in June, 1928, and have no children.

CLINIC DOCTORS ON TRIAL ANSWER ETHICS CHARGE

Tell Society Decision Is Up to Public.

Eight physicians who are being tried by the council of the Chicago Medical society because they are members of the staff of the United Medical Service, Inc., 23 East Jackson boulevard, answered the charges in a letter to the ethical relations committee of the society yesterday. The committee will report to the council next Tuesday night. The doctors are charged with unethical conduct.

"We feel that the ultimate decision as to what constitutes true ethics rests with the public rather than the present controlling element in the council of the Chicago Medical society," the statement read. It was signed by Drs. Charles R. Wiley, a member of the council; Roy W. Kline, Ernest B. Zeisler, L. J. Goodman, P. R. Casellas, J. Robert Johnson, George W. Funck, and G. L. Wagoner.

Test Case Before Court.

The charges were brought against the eight physicians because the United Medical Service, which is headed by Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz, former head of the Public Health institute, is incorporated for profit and advertises its low cost services. The orthodox group in control of the medical society has carried its battle against the new organization into the courts by bringing a test case against another concern in an effort to have corporations barred from the practice of medicine.

"This charge in no way raises or implies dishonest, immoral or unethical relationship with a patient, nor raises the question of our adequate medical training, ability or experience," says the statement of the eight clinic doctors. "We have already been recognized by diplomas of graduation from prominent medical schools, internship in class A hospitals and by licensure by the state; also by appointments to the staffs of hospitals and teaching institutions."

3,000 Members in County.

The letter detailed alleged subversive tactics on the part of the medical society controlling element to cause the expulsion of all physicians associated with the United Medical Service from positions on hospital and teaching staffs.

"It would be well for the reactionary medical leadership of the Chicago Medical society to remember that being a member of the society is not obligatory upon any physician; that of the nearly 7,000 physicians registered in Cook county less than 3,000 are members," the statement points out. Dr. Berkowitz said 300 physicians are supporting the United Medical Service, many of whom are members of the society.

AVIATION NOTES

BY HUGH SEXTON.

L. D. Seymour, president of American Airways, which operate to both coasts and the gulf from Chicago, announced yesterday that the system carried 5,593 passengers during February, an increase of 75 per cent over the same month of last year. Air express volumes have increased proportionately, he said.

United Air Lines flew 95 per cent of the 13,000,000 miles scheduled for its operations last year, thereby flying more mileage than any other air transport company in the world, according to P. G. Johnson, president of the system, which has its headquarters here. More than 9,000,000 of the 13,000,000 miles flown were on the coast to coast route.

The Twin Wasp, said to be the most powerful aviation motor produced in the United States, was announced yesterday by the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft company. It follows the Twin Wasp Jr., announced one year ago, and is a fourteen cylinder, two row, radial, air cooled motor.

20 FISHERMEN RESCUED FROM ICE FLOE IN LAKE

Ashland, Wis., March 8.—(AP)—The rescue of George La Rocque and Ollie Sandstrom near Little Girl Point, Mich., tonight, accounted for the last two of a score of Madeline island fishermen who were known to have been set adrift shortly before noon today on a large block of ice in Lake Superior.

While 15 fishermen were taken off in small boats and others leaped across the widening crack as the ice broke away from shore off Madeline and Sand islands, La Roque and Sandstrom moved slowly out of sight in a blinding snowstorm.

After drifting nearly 50 miles across the Lake Superior bay the marooned men were sighted by rescuers who stood for hours on the shore at Little Girl Point, where boats were kept in readiness.

Buffeted by strong winds during its slow journey across the bay, the huge cake of ice had dwindled to a comparatively small flow when it reached Little Girl Point.

Three dogs perished during the dangerous ride. They slipped into the water along with a light sleigh and fishing equipment when waves broke fissures in the floating ice. La Rocque and Sandstrom saved themselves by leaping onto the larger pieces of ice when the edges began to crumble.

EIGHT WIN GOLDEN GLOVES; TWO KNOCKOUTS

Cubs Break Camp Today.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Avalon, Cal., March 8.—Gink Hendrick, the affable sage from Tennessee, today slapped a homer off Guy Bush with the bases filled in the first inning of the final camp game of the year. This neutralized a four run lead the Yannigans had achieved in the first half of the inning. The 4 to 4 deadlock prevailed until one was out in the last half of the seventh and final inning. Woody English then knocked his third single and scored on Kiki Cuyler's triple for a 5 to 4 victory, which gave the regulars the intraclub season series by a margin of one victory.

HARVEY HENDRICK

Tomorrow will be getaway day, but there will be no sailing until after a fielding and batting drill. The Cub party of 71 persons will board the 3:45 o'clock steamer for Los Angeles, where on Friday afternoon the Cubs meet the New York Giants.

Grimm to Play.

Lon Warneke will be the starting pitcher in the first of the three Giant games and Manager "Jark" Grimm, who has not been in a competition this year, save to bat for Newsom today, will be at first base.

For a long time it appeared that the Cubs, most affluent club in the National league, would have to depart from this island strictly on the cuff. At noon today, however, President William L. Veeck produced some money. After paying club bills and personal tabs accumulated during the bank holiday, the surplus bank roll was doled out in emergency allotments and the Cubs will go away in good standing.

Malone Has Sore Arm.

Aside from Pat Malone's sore arm the squad will quit the island in excellent physical shape. Yerkes and Nelson, muscle victims for many days, made their debut in today's game and each reported he felt no ill effects.

The Cubs will play games with the Giants Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, engage in their one game of the year with the Los Angeles Angels Monday, and finish up with the Giants Tuesday.

Next Wednesday the transplanted Chicago city series will start. After playing the White Sox again on Thursday the Cubs go north to San Francisco and Sacramento before returning to Los Angeles to wind up their coast stay.

Ruth Practices at Yankee Camp; Still a Holdout

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8.—[Special.]—Babe Ruth came out for the New York Yankees' practice today, starting his 20th year as a big league ball player, and his 14th in Yankee livery. Ruth, however, is still a holdout.

Manager Joe McCarthy had all but three of his spring roster out in uniform, but the Babe, weighing 232 pounds, monopolized the limelight.

He posed for countless cameras, innumerable autograph hunters swarmed about him seeking and getting his signature, uncomplainingly, to everything from a mere scrap of paper to a standard baseball. He signed books and cards and diaries with a smile for everybody who advanced on him for the hour he was on the field.

Ruth drew 700 fans to the field, whereas the Yankees heretofore have been attracting but 150 or 200 a day.

Ruth, from present indication, will not sign a contract until Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, arrives here March 12. The Babe wants more than the $50,000 the club has offered.

HORSE PLAYERS, ALWAYS BROKE, GET LAST LAUGH

Anyway, They Had a Run for Money.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, March 8.—The bank holiday is not likely to have any serious effect on those citizens who follow the horses from place to place, summer and winter, and whose only fear of death always has been that it might catch them with a few dollars left unspent.

This scheme works out perfectly only when the subject's life and his bank roll come out exactly even. A few dollars left in the pants pocket hanging over the foot of the bed would mean that somewhere there had been a slight miscalculation and that some little enjoyment had been missed. Perhaps he should had bet those few more dollars on the red in the playroom in the night club the other evening. Then he would have had action for his money, anyway, instead of leaving it to some deputy coroner, who might save it for a rainy day.

Here's Ideal Plan.

The ideal way, I think, would be for our subject to lay himself down with just one dollar left in his pants and then, in the morning, send a boy out for the dope sheet, 15 cents for the dope sheet and 85 cents for the bellboy. Then a quiet, modest demise. Exactly even.

Such a citizen called me up in Washington last Sunday morning and said: "Ha-ha, am I laughing at my host of loving friends who always used to be taking me aside and giving me good advice? They said I was very foolish to be spending my earnings in night clubs or buying bets on horses and drinks for beautiful ladies. Now I ain't got any money, as usual, and they ain't got any money, too, so we are all even, except that I always got a run for mine. Let this be a warning to you, my friend. Never save your money."

Horse Betters Patriotic.

I know numerous citizens of this type and I must say that if it is unpatriotic to hoard money, then the purest patriotism will be found around such a place as Hialeah Park at this time. True, very little hoarding is done by the citizens who stand in the bread lines, but they are of a different type. They may never have had much money to hoard, whereas my friends will handle much cash in a lifetime, but, like the good infielder, who is taught to grab the ball and get rid of it in one fluent motion, they won't wear it out handling it.

We have had many horrible examples of extravagance in the sport business and some of them are still shuffling around doing the best they can, which is not very much, at odd chores and errands. Sometimes one is tempted to give a dollar to such a one partly out of generosity, let us grant, but partly also for the smug satisfaction of the thing.

"You remember the famous old Kid Which, who fought Langford and Jeffries, and all of them? A bum today I met him in the tunnel at the Garden shoving a broom, and gave him a dollar. And guess what he said. He said

Haas Will Be Leadoff Man for Sox---If Kress Delivers

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 8.—For tomorrow, at least, George Mule Haas, the former Athletic, is going to be the White Sox lead off hitter. Manager Lew Fonseca decided on that arrangement today when he picked his regular lineup for a second game with the Goof team. The game was scheduled originally for today, but Fonseca, hearing that the boys were stiff after yesterday's six inning game, thought a postponement advisable.

The lead off role is something that promises to give the Sox chief more or less concern. There isn't an experienced No. 1 hitter among the seven players he hopes will be regulars. Of the seven, Haas, who always batted second in the Athletics' attack, appears to have the best qualifications.

He's Set on Kress.

Fonseca's apparent determination to use Red Kress regularly in right field is causing the disturbance over a lead off man. Kress is desirable because he may hit far better than either Elias Funk or Evar Swanson. The latter two can do an excellent defensive job and possess speed on the bases, but they are not outstanding hitters. Their chance will not come until Kress proves he is not the batter he was with the St. Louis Browns.

The regular lineup tomorrow will be the same that will be used throughout the season. It will read, in the order of batting, Haas in center, Dykes at third, Fonseca at first, Simmons in left, Kress in right, Appling at short, Hayes at second, and the battery. If Kress is able to keep the right field job and if Haas isn't suitable as a lead off man, Fonseca may move Hayes to the No. 1 position or switch Haas and Dykes.

Simmons Wants to Play.

Simmons was permitted to use his own judgment about appearing in tomorrow's game, his first of the year. He said he preferred to play. Today, in his second workout, he took his regular turn in batting practice and entertained the customary 1,000 spectators with several hits over the left and center field fences.

All pitchers now are in shape. Even old Sam Jones pitched in batting practice today. He came up with some genuine curves. Those who will pitch in tomorrow's game were excused. They are Frasier, Gregory, and Kimsey if the game goes nine innings. Frasier, Gregory, and possibly Jones will pitch Sunday against a local team, and the workout is expected to put the first two in shape to face the Cubs Wednesday.

MONTE L. MUNN, EX-NEBRASKA STAR, IS DEAD

Indianapolis, Ind., March 8.—[Special.]—Monte Lee Munn, 32 years old, former football player at the University of Nebraska and later a member of the Nebraska legislature, died here today of heart disease. For the last three years he had lived in Indianapolis and was engaged in the retail coal business.

Chicago Rules the Roost; Has Seven of Eight Champs

BY ARCH WARD.

Chicago last night demonstrated convincingly that it has the best amateur boxers in the middle west. Seven of the eight who were crowned Golden Gloves champions are Chicagoans. The lone out of town entrant to survive was Johnny Baltzer of Davenport, Ia., who won a close decision over Lenny Cohen of Chicago for the flyweight title.

When Jimmy Cummings, north side middleweight qualifier, entered the ring last night for his championship bout with Fred Caserio, to whom he lost, he had a record of 73 straight victories. The last time Cummings lost a contest was a year and a half ago against Scotty Sylvano when a welterweight. Previously Jimmy had been beaten only by George Keenan, Johnny Phagan, and Dick Sisk.

Leo Rodak, who won Golden Gloves titles as a flyweight in 1931 and as a bantamweight in 1932, will turn professional within a few months. He entered the 1933 tournament as a featherweight. Rodak expects to place himself under the management of George Blake of Los Angeles.

All of the 16 judges who officiated in Golden Glove preliminaries worked in the finals. They drew numbers out of a hat to see how they would be paired.

The 160 pound semi-final between William Treest and Freddy Caserio developed the hottest competition of the evening. Caserio won the first

BY FRENCH LANE.

A high strung crowd, worn to a keen edge by 24 thrilling battles, watched Henry Rothler win the welterweight championship shortly before 12 o'clock last night. With the lifting of his arm in victory THE TRIBUNE'S sixth annual Golden Gloves tournament ended. He was the eighth champion to be proclaimed at Chicago Stadium during the evening's spectacular carnival of amateur boxing.

The other new champions are John Pacek, Max Marek, Fred Caserio, Johnny Baltzer, John Ginter, Leo Rodak, and Edward Ward. All of them are from Chicago except Baltzer, who hails from Davenport.

15,200 See Bouts.

The air of excitement and drama which is so apparent everywhere these days combined with the intense interest in the outcome of the fights made it one of the most unusual gatherings ever to see a boxing show. It was the largest crowd to have assembled in one place in Chicago since the bank holidays began.

In the midst of the program 15,200 spectators stood with bowed heads and paid silent tribute to Chicago's martyred mayor, Anton Cermak.

There were but three knockouts all night long, one of them coming in the semi-finals and the other two in the championship matches. John Ginter knocked out Robert Iverson in the second round to win the bantamweight championship and later Edward Ward stopped Johnny Dobler of Cleveland in two rounds to carry away the lightweight championship. The knockout in the semi-final round came in the welterweight division when Billy Celebron stopped King Wyatt of Fort Wayne in the third round.

Rothler Finds Celebron Tough.

As the curtain rolled down on the remarkable amateur show one of the most thrilling battles took place. Henry Rothler of the Catholic Youth Organization was fighting Billy Celebron of Trafton's gym. They are ancient rivals. Rothler, turning in his best fight of the tournament, managed to stay slightly in the lead and eventually wound up with the verdict over the toughest opponent he ever faced.

The out of town team trophy was won by the Davenport Times. The Chicago team trophy for the second time went to the Catholic Youth Organization. Five of the eight champions come from the C. Y. O.

The eight champions and eight runnersup will be members of the team which will fight the New York champions at the Stadium March 29. Eight alternates also were chosen by officials.

NEW CHAMPIONS TO BE CROWNED IN BIG TEN MEET

Hornbostel Is Only 1932 Winner to Return.

The way is clear for the rise of a new set of champions tomorrow and Saturday in the Big Ten meet at the University of Chicago fieldhouse. Charles Hornbostel of Indiana, the 880 champion, is the only title winner returning to defend his honors.

Dean Woolsey, the Illinois miler, has been timed at 4:20.1 and 4:17.2 in his last two races. Woolsey was handicapped last year by illness, after a fine start, but there is no question but that he is ready to run his best race this week.

Keller Leads Hurdlers.

Jack Keller of Ohio State, who won the hurdles last year, but was disqualified, should achieve that title this time.

One of the most interesting efforts in the meet will involve Hornbostel's attempt to run the mile and then come back in the half. Hornbostel faces a stiff race in the half mile from Ned Turner of Michigan, the man who placed second last year.

Cliff Watson, who had to run second to his teammate, Brocksmith, last year, should finally come into the two mile championship. Ivan Fuqua of Indiana will be out to get revenge for the trimming he was given last year by Edwin Russell and Charles De Baker of Michigan by beating De Baker in their second meeting at 440 yards.

Ward Perils Record.

Willis Ward of Michigan, a sophomore, will make his Big Ten debut in the high jump and may break the record. Dave Cook of Illinois, second in the shot put last season to Munn of Minnesota, is back this year. Either Seeley or Capt. Lenington of Illinois should take the pole vault.

he was going right over to the store and bet it on a hot parlay. I was sorry I let him have it."

But the famous old Kid Which, who fought Langford and Jeffries and all of them and let a fortune slip through his fingers so that nowadays he shoves a broom and runs errands for quarters, may not have squandered his earnings in any of the familiar deplorable ways. It could be that instead of sending his money in against the steeds and the dice he sent it in against investments on the advice of some extremely rich and altruistic patron engaged in the investment business, and came to the same result.

I can promise to produce for you a number of passé pugilists around the fighting centers today who were written about in the papers by such as me seven or eight years ago as very common-sensible, new type young men, fond of home life and with no taste for liquor or long chances, who are no better off than Kid Which, after all. Worse off, they are, in fact, because they had no money's worth for their money, but instead suffered from all the exhausting worries of the man who sees his investments melting away but can't do anything about it.

NEW HAMPSHIRE HOUSE APPROVES RACE TRACK BILL

Concord, N. H., March 8.—[Special.]—The pari-mutuel race track bill was passed today by the New Hampshire house of representatives by a vote of 273 to 109. The bill, which would provide for the use of pari-mutuel machines, was sent to the senate at once. The senate is reported to be in favor of its adoption.

Under the provisions of the measure the operation of betting machines would be legal throughout the state after such action had been voted by the citizens of the city involved. It would be in force, however, only during 1933 and 1934.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The University of Illinois gymnastic team finished second in the triangular meet with Chicago and Minnesota last Saturday. Illinois scored 1,021.5 points and Minnesota, 1,011. In the published account of the meet the Illinois and Minnesota scores were reversed.

GOLDEN GLOVES GO TO 8 BOXERS; 2 KNOCK OUT FOES

Now It's "Bring On That New York Team!"

Fred Caserio, fighting through most of three rounds with his left eye swollen shut, managed to keep hammering away long enough to beat Jim Cummings, a teammate from Kid Howard's gym.

Caserio's eye had been hurt more than a week ago. He had a terrific struggle on his hands to win his semifinal match from Bill Treest of Joliet. The eye was nearly closed when he climbed back into the ring for the title match.

Cummings aimed nearly every punch at the bad eye and hit it many times. Yet Caserio kept carrying the fight to his foe and still was on top when it ended. The crowd, aware of Caserio's game fight, stood and cheered him while he was presented with the golden gloves.

Marek Whips Miller.

Max Marek, the C. Y. O. light heavyweight champion, and Farmer Miller of Davenport put on one of their customary hard hitting struggles. Marek was an easy winner and it was grand revenge for him, for in the title match in the same division a year ago Miller won a close decision.

Marek is a marvelously improved boxer. The manner in which he whaled Miller made him stand out as one of the country's greatest amateurs.

Marek's Catholic Youth Organization teammate, John Pacek, became the heavyweight champion when he outpointed Jack Kranz, the veteran from Gary. Earlier in the evening Pacek had scored by a narrow margin over Adolph Wiater of Green Bay. His trip to the heavyweight throne was one of the great surprises of the tournament. He was the dark horse in the heavyweight class.

It's Baltzer by a Shade.

Only by the narrowest of margins was Johnny Baltzer of Davenport able to beat Leonard Cohen of Chicago for the flyweight title. Johnny's stirring rally in the third round turned the trick, after Cohen, who kept peppering the Davenport kid with his long left, had rolled up a good lead in the first two sessions.

While the boxers did not climb into the ring for the first bout until 8 o'clock, the crowd began to arrive early and the spacious arena was comfortably filled a half hour before the program opened. A steady stream of spectators was passing through the gates both on the Madison street and Warren avenue sides.

It wasn't strictly a Chicago gathering. Nineteen of the boys fighting on toward the titles came from surrounding cities, and hundreds of fans followed to cheer them along. The early cheering indicated the largest delegations had come from Peoria, Green Bay, Milwaukee, Joliet, Davenport and Rockford.

LETOURNER AND DEBAETS TO RIDE IN STADIUM RACE

Pairings for the six day bicycle race, which starts Sunday night in the Stadium, make Alfred Letourner of France and Gerard Debaets, Belgium, the pre-race favorites. This team won the New York six day race last week. It finished third in the last Stadium race.

Mickey Rodak, Chicago youngster, is paired with William [Torchy] Peden of Vancouver, B. C., who today is looked upon as the greatest six day rider in the game.

Bobby Thomas of Kenosha, Wis., who finished fourth in the New York race, will be paired with Norman Hill, one of the best of the American riders. Reggie McNamara and Harry Horan, always a dangerous team, will ride together again and Freddie Spencer, who is one of the fastest indoor riders in the world, will be teamed with Dave Lands.

Jimmy Walthour will team with Charley Ritter and Bobby Walthour and George Dempsey will ride together. Little Jules Audy has been paired with Bill Grimm.

Stagg Guest of Honor at Maroon Track Meet

A. A. Stagg, one of the earliest sponsors of intramural athletics, will be the guest of honor at the University of Chicago's ninth annual intramural carnival tonight at Bartlett gymnasium. Stagg plans to leave for the coast in two weeks to hold spring football practice at the College of the Pacific.

Schuesslers Lose, 32-16, in A. A. U. Tournament

Foreign Stars Seek Titles in Pingpong

The national pingpong championship tournament, which opens tomorrow night at the Palmer house, has attracted entries from Canada, England, Japan, and the Philippine islands in addition to the best players in the United States.

Great Britain's hope of the title will rest with Dougall Kittermaster of Canada and Bob Robinson of England. Robinson is a powerful athlete who is said to have one of the fastest serves in the game. He played on the Oxford team many years in matches with Cambridge.

Herbert Allen is a German, who learned the game at Leipzig, and is noted for his effective backhand and chop shots. Another serious contender for the title now held by Coleman Clark of Chicago is Eduardo Yap, a Filipino, who came within one point of defeating Clark in the western championships a year ago.

One of the early round matches which is attracting attention is the meeting of Ted Peng, a Chinese, and Yoshio Fushimi, who comes from Japan. Fushimi is an exponent of the penholder grip and one of the most consistent defensive players in the tournament.

The Parker cup, a permanent trophy, will go to the winner of the men's championship. The men's doubles and women's singles titles also will be at stake.

Downers Grove Defeats Morton, 35-12, in Tourney

Sterling Morton of Cicero lost its state high school basketball championship last night in the first round of the Elmhurst district tournament, falling before Downers Grove, 35 to 12. Led by Renniger, guard, and Slanek, 200 pound forward, Downers Grove was in front throughout in accomplishing the upset. Downers Grove gained a lead of 20 to 9 at the half.

Golfer, Struck on Head by Ball, Dies of Injury

Abilene, Tex., March 8.—(AP)—A blow on the head from a golf ball driven off the tee by a friend brought death today to Cecil H. Folliard, 33, railroad representative here. Folliard was hit behind the right ear yesterday as he stooped to place his ball some 60 feet in front of the tee from which D. M. Dickey of Anson, Tex., made his drive.

Blackhawks Deny Report of Deal for Gardiner

Reports of an offer of $15,000 and Center Frank Boucher from the New York Rangers for Goalie Chuck Gardiner were denied by Chicago Blackhawk officials last night.

Boucher, it was pointed out, would be a welcome addition to the Chicago team, but he would hardly balance the loss of Gardiner, who is rated as one of the greatest net tenders in hockey.

Transfer of Boucher would break up the famous Cook-Boucher-Cook line which has been the fire of the Rangers' attack for the last few years.

Top notch goal tenders are extremely scarce, but it might be possible for the Hawks to get a suitable substitute for Gardiner with the money such a deal would include. Regardless of these possibilities, however, Blackhawk officials declared they were not interested in any negotiations that included Gardiner.

The Hawks are in Ottawa tonight, where they complete their season's series with the Senators. Saturday night they move over to Montreal to meet the Maroons, and on Tuesday they go to Boston. After the Boston game the team returns home to complete its season's play in Chicago, meeting the Detroit Red Wings in the final game at the Stadium a week from next Sunday.

Lolo Couture, who suffered a wrenched ankle in the Ottawa game at the Stadium Tuesday night, accompanied the team on the present road trip, but will not be used except in a case of emergency, Manager Gorman said.

round, lost the second, and won the third. Caserio, a veteran of Golden Gloves, A. A. U., and Olympic meets, said Treest was the strongest opponent he has met.

Edward Yde, 175 pound member of the Dubuque squad who was defeated by Vernon Miller of Davenport, was the last to appear to weigh in and be examined yesterday. He drove in by automobile from his home in Freeport and arrived at 5:45 o'clock, only 15 minutes before the deadline. He is a brother to Emil Yde, former major league pitcher.

Henry Rothier, C. Y. O. welterweight title holder, used every good luck charm available to win his second straight Golden Gloves title and his first as a 147 pounder. He ordered a pal to wear his C. Y. O. green coat, on the lapel of which was a white carnation donated by a girl friend. Henry treated himself to a quart of ice cream and a big black cigar immediately after he finished fighting.

Three of the most prominent football coaches were in the front rows. They were Heartley Anderson of Notre Dame, Dick Hanley of Northwestern, and Judge Walter P. Steffen of Carnegie Tech.

Invitations were sent to St. Catherine's school, Du Bois, Pa.; St. Aloysius academy, Rome, N. Y.; St. Mary's High school, Plattsburg, W. Va., and Catholic High school, Little Rock, Ark.

The four bring the total of entries to 14, with 18 more to be chosen within the next few days. The Rev. E. L. Holton, director of the tournament, has approximately 40 requests from schools in all parts of the United States desiring places.

St. Catherine's from Du Bois, Pa., is regarded as one of the strongest prep teams in the east. It has won 16 and lost one and later defeated its conqueror by 17 points. The team has averaged 33 points a game to its opponents' 13.

Seminole Sees Ghosts of Past in Campfire

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Big Cypress Swamp, Fla., March 8.—Our campfire tonight is brightening a small corner of this inhospitable and dreary swamp. It throws a circle of red light upon our tent and upwards among the cabbage palms. Sitting next to us around the blaze is W. Stanley Hanson, the best informed student of the Seminole Indian in this part of the country. Reclining against the trunk of a palm just a few feet from the fire is John Cypress, the young Seminole who is making this trip with us through his people's country as an interpreter.

Suddenly we see a moving shadow above us in the rustling fronds of the palms. With our eyes on the campfire we sense this movement rather than see it clearly. Something passed over us quickly, almost noiselessly. Then it was gone, out into the pale moonlight and the gray cypress swamp.

"So-lo-pa-tee?" asked Hanson, turning to Johnny Cypress.

John hesitated a moment, smiled, and then in a low voice replied: "No, I don't think so."

It's Not a Ghost.

We wondered what Hanson meant by "so-lo-pa-tee." He told us that it meant ghost in the Seminole language. Had a ghost floated over our campsite, a gray ghost out of the lonely cypress swamp? No, the Seminole did not think so.

But, as our conversation continued around the blazing campfire, it developed that there are many "ghosts" in this great area into which the Seminoles have been driven by the constant pressure of white settlers. They are "ghosts" of other days. In 1774 the Seminoles not only had free range over much of Florida, but in cypress canoes large enough to hold 20 or 30 men they regularly crossed to Cuba and the Bahamas. But from that time on the story has been a sad one for the Indians.

Slowly but surely this tribe has been pushed southward from Devil's Garden, Fisheating Creek, and other places which they formerly called their home. And apparently Uncle Sam has been of little help to them in their struggle to locate in a suitable section.

A Dreary Country.

Now, we find the Seminoles driven into the dreariest swamps in Florida, a country which no one else wants and in which none but Indians will live. A tribe that still lives chiefly off the land, these Seminoles find that even the wild game is being taken from them by white hunters, who come into the swamps for turkey and deer. The Seminoles have many "ghosts" around their campfires in the big swamps where they manage to eke out a precarious existence.

BULGARIA DRAFTS ALL YOUTHS INTO ENFORCED LABOR

Put to Work on State Construction Schemes.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Feb. 20.—[By Mail.]—Two unique institutions have been developed in Bulgaria. One is the national labor service, or "troudovaks," and the other is the "chorbadjia," or village boss.

The troudovak or obligatory service grew out of the treaty of Neuilly, by which Bulgaria was forbidden to maintain a regular army and police force exceeding 33,000 men.

So instead of sending the youth of the country of military age to do their army training, the government soon after the war invented a sort of moral equivalent in the law for obligatory labor service, which would at least keep them hard and fit.

Carry Out State Schemes.

The labor is used for carrying out large state construction schemes. The results of the service, which has now been operative for ten years, are said to be entirely satisfactory and have been profitable to the government. Experts from Italy, France, Hungary, and Germany have visited Bulgaria to inspect the working of the service.

About 45,000 boys reach the labor service age each year and are called up the same as soldier recruits in other countries, furnished with gray uniforms, caps with insignia, and shovels. Each takes an oath to the king. The labor brigades have their flags and their music. They are managed by a general superintendent in Sofia who gets $93 a month, and fifteen district superintendents who get $43 a month.

The period of service is eight months and during this period the youth is subject to strict discipline. No one can get a passport to leave the country unless he can show a certificate that he has done his time on one of the labor brigades.

Receive No Pay.

The labor units are employed mainly on the construction of earthworks for new railway lines, dams, drainage, roads, exploitation of forests, water supplies, and bridges. They are maintained by the state under the ministry of public works. They get no pay. The "troudovaks" live in camps like soldiers.

School children in Bulgaria are also required to do a certain amount of work, such as planting trees, cleaning up school and churchyards, and whitewashing fences.

1. The building of 1,800 miles of state roads, including 450 bridges.

3. The production of 1,000,000 railway ties, 350,000 telegraph poles and 350,000 props for the state mines.

4. The construction of two large state dams along the Danube river, which have resulted in the reclamation of a large tract of agricultural land.

5. The drainage of large areas of swamp and marsh land, which have been converted into agricultural land and freed the population in the district from malaria.

"He Who Eats Meat."

Chorbadjia means roughly "he who eats meat" and the name of the boss seems to have been derived from his special privilege. If there was meat in former days the chorbadjia was supposed to get it and that made him strong and a leader.

In the country districts every village, every store, and every family has its chorbadjia, who usually is a grandfather, father, or elder brother, a lean faced, hard fisted tough guy who rules the roost and wears a thin band of wool around the collar of his coat to denote his authority.

He rules the peasant household, controls the purse strings, buys and sells the crops and supplies, assigns the daily task, meets other chorbadjias in the village saloon, and decides what crops to plant and how much.

Judges Worth of Neighbors.

He is also a kind of deacon in the church, passes judgment on the economic and moral worth of members of the community, dislikes reforms, walks in the path of his fathers, and preserves rigidly the local customs and traditions.

When he enters the house every one gets up and no one starts eating at table before him. The Bulgarians say that the obstinacy of the chorbadjias has been a large factor in preserving the unity of their nation.

J. FRANK ALDRICH, ONCE PROMINENT IN POLITICS, DIES

J. Frank Aldrich, once a prominent political figure, died yesterday in the King Home for Old Men, 360 East Garfield boulevard, where he had lived for the last two years. He was 80 years old. Mr. Aldrich was one of the founders of the Union League club and was one of the organizers of the Calumet, Hamilton, Hyde Park, and Kenwood clubs.

J. F. ALDRICH.

He served as county commissioner from 1856 to 1888, and was president of the reform board that succeeded the "boodle régime." Mr. Aldrich was commissioner of public works from 1891 to 1893 and served as a congressman from Illinois during the next four years. He managed the campaign of Thomas B. Reed for the presidential nomination in 1896 and was tendered the appointment of consul general to Cuba by President McKinley in 1897. The blowing up of the battleship Main precluded a change in ambassadors in Havana and the appointment was withdrawn.

Mr. Aldrich was a descendant of the first Aldrich to land in America, on the coast of Massachusetts on Nov. 6, 1631. His father, William, was president of the reform council in 1876 and served in congress as representative of the First Illinois district from 1877 to 1885. Mr. Aldrich is survived by two sons and two daughters and a brother, Frederick C. Aldrich.

DAUGHTER OF NOTED INDIAN SCOUT IS DEAD

Thermopolis, Wyo., March 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Virginia Bridger Hahn, 84, last surviving child of Jim Bridger, noted trapper and Indian scout, is dead.

Ten years ago she filed a $1,000,000 libel action against a motion picture corporation, producer of the historical western drama "The Covered Wagon," in which there was a characterization of Bridger.

Mrs. Hahn charged the picture slandered her father in the depiction of early western life.

The case, tried in federal court, ended when Judge Albert I. Reeves sustained a defense demurrer on the ground no one could recover damages for defamation of the character of an ancestor.

Mrs. Hahn was born in 1849 at Fort Bridger, Wyo., a fur trading post founded by her father. Her mother was a full blooded Ute Indian. When 5 years old Mrs. Hahn was taken by her father to a convent at Carondelet, Mo., near St. Louis, where she was educated.

Bridger died many years ago. He was buried in Mount Washington cemetery of Kansas City.

SENATOR CUTTING IS MUCH ANNOYED BY QUARANTINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, March 8.—Senator Bronson Cutting [Rad., N. M.] did not like it at all when quarantine officers at daybreak requested that he line up with 100 other American passengers aboard the French liner Lafayette to pass quarantine.

In fact, after reluctantly opening his stateroom door, Senator Cutting remarked that he did not intend to go ashore until 11 o'clock, or until he was good and ready. While waiting passengers jeered the senator canal officials persuaded him to line up with the others, which he did after delaying the West Indian cruise passengers, anxious to get ashore, for thirty minutes.

Passengers said the American dollar was being refused aboard the ship in payment for purchases, charges being made in franc values. The purser said that in view of the lack of exchange quotations on the dollar it had been found necessary to demand payment in francs.

AM. SUGAR CO. CUTS CHARGES, LIFTS INCOME

Babst Cites Failure of Cuba Control.

Operations of the American Sugar Refining company for 1932 resulted in an increase in net profit over 1931, according to the annual report of Earl D. Babst, chairman of the board, to stockholders, issued yesterday. The company reported $4,327,986 net profit for 1932, compared with $4,155,031 for 1931. Per share earning was $2.62 on the common stock for 1932, compared with $2.23 for 1931.

The increase was due largely to savings on interest charges due to redemption of bonds. Operating profit for 1932 was $5,349,459, compared with $5,658,987 in 1931. Cash on hand as of Dec. 31, 1932, was $14,870,944, compared with $17,008,460 at the close of the preceding year. Accounts and loans payable stood at $4,275,515, compared with $3,541,376 at the end of 1931.

Where Sugar Dollar Goes.

The report showed that of the sugar dollar 37.5 cents went to the United States treasury, 25.6 cents to the Cuban producer, 24.6 cents to the jobber and retailer, and 12.3 cents to the refiner.

Mr. Babst said the sugar industry suffered last year from fluctuations in raw prices, lower American consumption, and increases of imports of refined sugar from Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippine Islands in competition with the domestic product.

Mr. Babst calls attention to "the futility of artificial measures attempting to override in agricultural products the economic law of supply and demand." He cites the case of Cuba, where the sugar industry is now in dire straits. Cuba's share of world production declined from 21 per cent in 1926 to less than 10 per cent in 1932, and the outlook for 1933 is for less than 8 per cent, he says.

Competition Affects Cuba.

Cuban sugar going into consumption in the United States declined from 58 per cent in 1926 to 28 per cent in 1932, due to the inroads of United States beet sugar and cane sugar from the American possessions. Raw cane sugar is selling for less than 1 cent a pound in Cuba, or less than one-third of what it did when restrictions on its production were put into effect. He says 50 out of 183 Cuban centrals have closed.

Commenting on the failure of the United States and Cuba to assure markets after the world war, Mr. Babst says that Cuba's dilemma nevertheless challenges sympathy when its difficult position is recalled. He says that during the war the control of sugar by the United States, Great Britain, France, and Italy became absolute. All four countries depended on Cuba for their sugar supply. Cuban production was stimulated in the interests of all without definite commitments by any of these nations for markets at the end of hostilities.

Situation After World War.

This wartime stimulation continued after the armistice to meet the pressing demands during the post-war period. When the emergency passed all the interested nations began to develop their own sources of supply, without any consideration for Cuba, which had supplied their needs during the war. Subsidies, preferences, and tariffs were established to build up sugar industries. Great Britain, which received the greatest benefits, Mr. Babst said, built up its source of supply within the empire, leaving Cuba to hold the bag.

Telling of Cuba's loss of its markets, Mr. Babst says:

"Cuba stood helpless and almost crushed with the weight of her stimulated and unmarketable production, and United States refiners, using Cuban raws, saw themselves supplanted in export markets—adding to the further distress of Cuba. Here, plainly, is an opportunity for sympathy, equity, economic consideration, and bargaining."

CUBA EXTENDS BANK HOLIDAY UNTIL MONDAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, March 8.—After a six hour cabinet meeting to discuss the banking crisis, President Gerardo Machado tonight signed a decree extending the national holiday through Sunday. Congress remains in session ready to sanction emergency legislation that the president may recommend.

President Machado announced that banks will be allowed to open Monday with withdrawal restrictions ranging from 5 to 25 per cent, depending on the liquidity of the individual banks. Planes are bringing $26,000,000 from the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank, consigned to the branch of the National City bank of New York, to help meet the emergency.

Anticipating the end of the original holiday scheduled tomorrow morning, hundreds had waited in line today to draw funds. The government warned that if a rush occurs Monday, withdrawal limitations will be made more strict.

Weed Out Bad Bankers Urges '100%' Nichols

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Among the innumerable plans advanced for solving the nation's banking ills and putting banks on a sound basis is one suggested by J. M. Nichols, president of the First National bank of Englewood.

Nichols is no idle theorist. He's a banker, son of a banker father, and ever since he ascended to the presidency of the First National of Englewood thirteen years ago he has been putting his ideas into practice.

Throughout the country he is known among bankers as "Hundred Per Cent" Nichols, because of his insistence that a bank should keep its finances sufficiently liquid to be able at any time to pay out a hundred cents on the dollar to depositors.

Tell Depositor Where Money Is.

"The only way to build up a sound banking structure," says Nichols, "is to force banks to issue detailed reports like those the state of New York gets from insurance companies.

"Let there be enacted a law providing that beginning Jan. 1, 1935, such detailed statements must be published. That would give bankers two years to clear out of the real estate and security business and get down to fundamentals. After that such statements could be made quarterly as at present. Instead of being Chinese puzzles like present bank statements, however, they would actually tell the depositor what had happened to his money and how safe it was."

If skeptics doubt the feasibility of such a course of action Nichols has but to point to his own bank, where for years he has been putting these ideas into practice.

Own Bank Statements Clear.

The First National bank of Englewood puts out a statement of financial condition about the size of a newspaper page containing lists of all its loans and investments.

Nichols applauded the plan proposed in Washington of classifying banks into groups and allowing only those in excellent financial condition to continue to operate.

"Such a plan," he said, "is bound to put us immediately and permanently on the road to recovery.

"Banks whose total resources on March 1, 1933, showed less than a 50 per cent liquidity should be closed immediately. Their officers and boards of directors have definitely proved their inability as bankers.

"So long as we continue to nurse them they will remain financial cancers in our national structure. A man's ability does not change overnight. If they have failed in the past, and if allowed to continue will fail again.

Judge Banker by Results.

"Banks showing a liquidity of 50 to 70 per cent could rightfully be opened with restrictions on withdrawals. Those showing better than 75 per cent liquidity should be opened immediately and allowed to carry on business in the regular way. Such banks are not in need of help, advice, or, governmental regulation. They have proved their mettle and can be relied upon to keep faith with their depositors.

"The future of the country is at stake. Bankers should not be judged on the basis of sentiment but rather on the basis of the present liquidity of their banks. Some of our best banquet table bankers have made miserable failures.

"Public confidence is a thing that must be earned. It cannot be bought through Reconstruction Finance corporation loans or the issuing of scrip.

"Probably our greatest trouble in the last few years has been a lack of sufficient courage on the part of political and financial leaders to enable them to face squarely the issues before them."

USERS OF GOLD, SILVER HAVE TO EXPLAIN NEEDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 8.—Commercial dealers in gold and silver were using the greatest care today in filling orders for those metals to make sure that none of it was finding its way into the hands of hoarders in violation of President Roosevelt's bank proclamation.

Requisitions were scrutinized carefully by the dealers and had to be accompanied by evidence of legitimate need for the metal before the orders were filled. This was done to guard against collusion, although dealers said they knew of no cases in which orders of manufacturers were merely screens for delivery to hoarders.

Platinum prices were reported to have risen from the usual nominal price of $21 a troy ounce to bids as high as $30 as a result of a speculative demand growing out of the embargo on gold and silver.

CHICAGO'S MARKETS KEEPING UP FLOW OF FOOD PRODUCTS

While security and commodity futures exchanges remained closed in Chicago yesterday, the transfer of food products continued. The butter market reported an advance of 1 cent a pound, with the close at 18 cents. The egg market was a little easier. It was reported that a considerable part of the trading yesterday in butter and eggs was on a cash basis.

The fruit auction reports that 46 cars changed hands, with prices steady. Members of the auction are coöperating with other markets to prevent price boosting.

A wholesale merchant explained how the banks are taking care of food business. A wholesaler takes the bill of lading and draft accompanying a shipment to his bank. He writes a check on his frozen bank account to cover the draft of the shipper. The bank accepts the check and sends it to the Federal Reserve, which in turn sends the check to the reserve bank nearest the shipper. The shipper then gets his cash through a member bank in his town. The wholesaler so far has been forced to extend credit to retailers.

GRAIN PARLEY FAILS TO AGREE ON OPENING PIT

Would Release Farm Board's Futures.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A conference held at Washington yesterday between Henry Morganthau Jr., chairman of the federal farm board, President P. B. Carey of the Chicago Board of Trade and representatives of other grain exchanges failed to arrive at conclusion as to when future trading should be resumed.

Although hope for immediate reopening was abandoned, the group decided to continue its session tomorrow in an effort to work out an emergency plan for releasing contracts for future delivery of wheat now held by the farm board, with which the millers may hedge sales of flour in the meanwhile.

Await Banks Reopening.

"Secretary of the Treasury Woodin's regulations authorizing the banks to make payment for the purpose of foodstuffs," said Mr. Carey, "was a step in the right direction but it did not cover futures transactions and trade resumption depends entirely on the settlement of the banking situation."

In La Salle street it was pointed out that the grain, stock and commodity exchanges would hardly dare to resume operations until the banking situation was normal, inasmuch as it might subject the numerous firms to a demand for currency from customers. These demands could not be met unless the banks were open.

A proposal was made by Morgenthau that the farm board release the 30,391,000 bushels in wheat futures it owns to help stabilize milling operations and flour sales during the bank holiday.

Flour Mills Closing.

Millers explained to the conference that some flour mills have already shut down and others have curtailed production because of their inability to hedge their purchases of cash grain and so insure themselves against price fluctuations.

Morgenthau then asked the conference to ascertain if the board could dispose of its futures without reopening of the exchanges. Both "legal and practical difficulties" were found to prevent this and the conference tomorrow will "seek some way around these difficulties."

Domestic flour mills grind from 1,500,000 to 1,750,000 bushels of wheat daily, so the board's holdings could be liquidated in little more than two weeks. The board's futures holdings constitute the last of the stabilization wheat acquired during its effort to "peg" the price of the commodity. The board no longer holds cash wheat.

Wheat Off at Winnipeg.

Trading in grain in the world's markets has come to practically a standstill awaiting a settlement of the financial situation in the United States. Operations in Winnipeg wheat and other grains yesterday were not large. Chicago interests were on both sides of the market. Broomhall has revised his estimate on the world's import requirements for the season and makes them 664,000,000 bushels, or 40,000,000 bushels less than previously.

Announcement that the Grain Stabilization corporation was still long more than 30 million bushels of wheat futures, made late Tuesday, was responsible for some selling at Winnipeg. The close was at net losses of ¾ to 1 cent per bushel. May finished at 50⅝ cents, July at 51⅝ cents, and October at 53 cents in Canadian funds. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ cent lower, rye off ⅝ cent, and flax seed 1⅛ cents per bushel. Liverpool wheat closed ½ pence lower, with some pressure of Argentine grain reported. Trading was limited.

Business on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday was at a standstill, including transactions in cash grain. Receipts of one car each of wheat and oats and 38 cars corn were reported. A majority of commission houses have temporarily abandoned their private wire systems.

BRIGHTER DAYS REDUCE OUTPUT OF ELECTRICITY

Brighter weather this year resulted in a decline in output of electricity in the Chicago area for the week of March 4, according to the Commonwealth Edison company. Output totaled 90,642,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 97,204,000 kilowatt hours in the same week last year, a decline of 6.8 per cent.

Output for the whole nation declined 6.4 per cent from last year, according to the Edison Electric institute, which reported total production of 1,422,875,000 kilowatt hours for the week ended March 4.

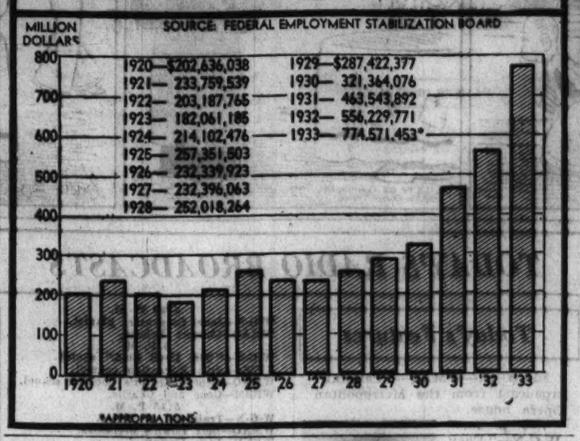

Power consumption in the central industrial district was 9.6 per cent below last year, 5.2 per cent in the Atlantic seaboard territory, 7.1 per cent in New England, and 5.3 per cent on the Pacific coast.

BRITISH BANKING STAND ON GOLD BASIS UNCHANGED

LONDON, March 8.—(AP)—The domestic banking emergency in the United States has not changed Great Britain's policy so far as return to the gold standard is concerned, it was learned today from the highest financial quarters of the British government.

The British policy was reaffirmed thus: While the nation looks forward to an eventual return to gold as the most suitable international standard of value, no return can be contemplated until there is promise of a more workable system than existed just before Britain abandoned gold in the fall of 1931.

Construction Expenditures of the Federal Government

Higher Price Trend Shown in Basic Goods

New York, March 8.—(AP)—Money's the thing this week, but meanwhile Wall street is closely watching the things that money buys— commodities. Basic raw materials have appreciated in price over the last two or three days. Gains have mostly been small but sufficiently general to indicate the upward trend.

Futures exchanges are closed, so the only available quotations are on goods for immediate delivery. In cotton trade circles it was reported that offerings were being given to mills at 7¾ to 8 cents a pound, compared with last Friday's closing spot quotation of 6.35 cents.

The south continued buying and selling cotton today with prices generally well above the last quoted prices on the exchanges. Augusta, Ga., reported the biggest increase with sales of 48 bales of ⅞ middling at 7 cents, 65 points above the 6.35 spot quotation when New York closed March 3 and 105 points above the March 1 closing New Orleans price of 5.95.

Sugar Prices Firm.

Raw sugar held at 3.05 cents a pound, against 2.87 cents at the close of business last week. Manufacturers lifted refined to 4.10 cents a pound wholesale; the recent quotation was generally 3.90.

Lead dealers reported a brisk business and some producers lifted the price to 3¼ cents a pound, an advance of ¼ cent. Tin was up ¼ cent to 25½ cents a pound; zinc firmed a tenth of a cent to 2.80 cents, East St. Louis; antimony rose ¼ cent to 6 cents a pound, and quicksilver jumped $1 to a range of $52-$53 a flask.

Flour Up at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 8.—(AP)—Flour prices showed sharp increases here today. Bakery flour showed the largest advance, standard and second patents each gaining 30 cents, while family flour was up 15 cents. Standard patents were quoted at $4.30-$4.40 a barrel and second patents $4.20-$4.30 a barrel. Family patents were quoted at $4.25-$4.35 a barrel.

Millfeeds also gained sharply, pure bran advancing $1 per ton in carload lots, to $12.50-$13. Standard middling were $11 to $11.50 per ton, one dollar higher than yesterday. Millfeeds in some instances have gained as much as $2 to $3 per ton since the last trade on Friday.

FARM RELIEF TO UNITE LEASING AND ALLOTMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 8.—A cross between the domestic allotment plan and the farm leasing plan is the latest program for farm relief. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace so announced today at his initial press conference.

The plan will not take definite form, however, he explained, until it has been passed on by the representatives of the major farm groups, who will meet with him Friday.

"We are just offering the benefits of our facilities and our technical knowledge," he declared.

The plan would mean a processing tax on wheat, cotton, and hogs, but with the benefit paid to the producer, not on the basis of some proportion of his crop, but in the form of a rental for acres taken out of production.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 8.—One of the complex problems confronting federal reserve and treasury authorities is the status of $400,959,200 in gold, under earmark for account of foreign central banks, in the New York Reserve bank, at the close of business last Friday. Ownership of this gold is vested in foreign central banks, and it has already been deducted from American monetary gold stocks. Yet foreign central banks under the terms of the President's embargo upon gold shipments cannot obtain possession of it, cannot order its shipment.

When the reserve banks reopen the foreign central banks may have the power to sell it to the reserve banks, replenishing the country's gold stock, but at the same time giving foreign banks a $400,959,200 deposit which might be drawn upon through the foreign exchange market, aiding further to depress the value of the dollar in terms of other currencies. Though the country would be obtaining a valuable banking asset, it would be assuming at the same time an embarrassing international liability.

LONDON MARKET PUTS AMERICAN STOCKS HIGHER

Expect U. S. to Stay on Gold Basis.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 8.—Shares of American companies moved higher in trading on the London Stock exchange today. The feeling at the close of trading was somewhat more confident. Gold mine shares were the feature of the trading, on the expectation that the United States will remain on the gold standard. Bar silver closed at 18 pence an ounce, up ⅛. This was the highest price since last November. Belief that the United States will use more silver coins was responsible for speculative buying.

Final quotations of American shares and the changes follow:

	Closing.	Net Chge.
Canadian Pacific	13½	+ ⅝
Drug, Inc.	48	+ ¼
International Nickel	11¼	+ ⅛
Int. Tel. & Tel.	9	+ ⅛
Nat. Dairy Prod.	18	+1⅜
U. S. Steel	39½	+1

Paris Market Active, Steady.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 8.—As a result of buying orders from abroad, activity on the Paris bourse increased today. The market was able to overcome profit taking and the close was steady. The pound sterling rate dropped from 88.80 to 87.50 francs.

Berlin Stocks Are Firm.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Stocks Gain at Montreal.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, March 8.—Prices of stocks were able to show gains at the close of trading on the stock exchange today. Trading was more active, the turnover for the day being 11,000 shares. Canadian Pacific was strong and finished at 11¾, up ⅝. International Nickel closed at 9⅛.

NEW SMALL CAR WILL BE SHOWN BY CHEVROLET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., March 8.—The first public showing of a new and smaller line of automobiles which will supplement the present 1933 series will be made Saturday by the Chevrolet Motor company. The present line was brought out last December.

The cars will be designed as standard sizes and are to be priced considerably below the present range. The new models are said to be primarily intended for business use and for owners who want a car without de luxe features and extra long wheel base.

"No organization consistently conservative as Chevrolet would make such a move without feeling that the outlook amply justified it," said H. T. Ewald, president of the Campbell Ewald company, in announcing the new line. "Such aggressiveness on the part of the largest production company in the world's largest industry must give business men everywhere additional confidence and courage."

MIDLAND UNITED HAS '32 DEFICIT OF $1,926,000

The Midland United company, holding firm for the Indiana utility properties formerly controlled by the Insull interests, yesterday reported a deficit of $1,926,000 for 1932. This compares with net income of $2,335,000 reported for 1931 by the Insull management. The deficit does not include $2,249,000 in accrued dividends on the cumulative preferred stock of subsidiaries.

The company had collateral with a book value of $67,121,000 pledged as security for loans at the end of 1932. Of the total $1,447,000 was loaned to affiliated companies who in turn had rehypothecated the pledges. The company is jointly controlled by the big Chicago operating companies.

Managers of Italian Bank Quit to Allow New Board

MILAN, Italy, March 8.—(AP)—Giuseppe Toeplitz, managing director since 1904 of Italy's leading bank, the Banca Commerciale Italiana, resigned today, explaining that he desired a less active post. He will become a vice president. Subsequently the whole administrative board announced they would resign on March 25 to allow the election of a new board of eleven members instead of the present twenty-six members.

DOLLAR IS FIRM IN THE BOOTLEG MONEY TRADING

Europe Sees Squeeze of Short Sellers.

Dollar's Good in Paris

PARIS, March 8.—(AP)—The banking emergency in the United States seems, on the basis of small sporadic transactions, to have increased rather than diminished the value of the dollar. An American restaurant is offering a table d'hote dinner for 25 francs, with three francs change from every dollar. In private purchase the dollar was bringing 27 francs. A fashionable specialty shop advertised that it believed in the dollar and would accept it at 26 francs.

While the dollar still was not quoted officially in world financial centers yesterday, indications were that other nations are little worried about the present banking difficulties of the United States. In the bootleg markets the dollar was quoted only slightly under its closing prices of last Friday.

Some European banking circles predict that the European short account, estimated variously from half a billion to a billion dollars, will be caught high and dry. It is said the speculators will be unable to purchase enough dollars to cover their commitments when exchange trading is resumed, and the squeeze will force dollars sharply higher.

Dollar Up in Paris.

In Paris the growing belief that the United States will remain on the gold standard had a tendency to bring the dollar up toward the gold point. There was no official trading and the little unofficial dealings in the dollar were reported to be on a basis of 25.25 francs to the dollar.

In London the dollar was unofficially quoted at much nearer the last official rate of $3.44¾. Financial London still is talking of a rate of $3.50 or slightly over at the reopening of American exchange.

It is generally felt the United States should be well able, with her large gold stocks, favorable trade balance and commanding position as a creditor nation to restore the dollars external relations.

Gold Down in London.

The price of gold today dropped to 118 shillings 11 pence an ounce, the lowest since Sept. 24, while silver rose further to 18 pence an ounce and 18 1-16 forward on the statement America will use more silver coinage.

The Bank of England's gold purchases came almost to a standstill today, only £42,364 being bought. Sterling reacted against the leading foreign currencies.

From Brussels came the report that the dollar had slipped in the bootleg market from 32.50 francs yesterday to

Stock Market Waits on N.Y. Banks Alone

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 8.—The New York stock exchange will reopen as soon as adequate banking facilities are provided for the consummation of transactions in securities it was indicated today. For this reason there is a possibility that the exchange and other security and commodity markets in this city will reopen Friday or Saturday.

If the New York banks return to a normal basis, the stock exchange probably will reopen at once, regardless of the situation in out-of-town banking centers, brokers said. It was pointed out that last week, when most states were observing bank holidays, the stock exchange continued to function, and it was only after a New York banking holiday had been ordered that the exchange closed. Out-of-town holders of securities continued to sell securities here last week, thus raising funds, although they were unable to buy New York balances.

Gives Banks a Market.

One of the advantages of prompt reopening of the local markets would be that marketability would be given to such assets of banks as bonds, government securities and in some cases stocks.

Brokers declared that the equilibrium of the stock market had been seriously impaired by the holiday since last Friday. Under instructions from the exchange, brokers have been receiving buying and selling orders for securities since Tuesday. Although relatively few new orders have been received, there has been widespread cancellation of selling orders which were already on the brokers' books.

This trend, coupled with the favorable attitude toward common stocks in Wall street during the last few days, led brokers to expect a good demand for securities when trading is resumed.

Expect No Restrictions.

For this reason brokers do not believe that restrictions on short selling or minimum prices will be necessary to stabilize trading when the exchange reopens. Minimum prices were used in 1914, when the exchange reopened after the three and one-half month holiday caused by the outbreak of the world war.

In September, 1931, short selling was barred for two days after England had suspended gold payments. These devices do not appear to be needed under the present circumstances, brokers said.

If a technical corner should develop in certain stocks the exchange might arrange the terms under which shorts would settle, but such a development was regarded as unlikely.

It is possible, however, that restrictions may be placed on the withdrawal of cash from New York by out of town sellers if the exchange reopens before the banks in other cities are on a normal basis.

Live Stock Rate Hearing Ends with Briefs Ordered

The live stock rate hearing held before Examiner William Disque of the interstate commerce commission was concluded yesterday afternoon. Contesting parties were ordered to file briefs of their arguments not later than May 15.

ALDRICH URGES PURGING BANKS OF SPECULATION

Chase National in Reform Move.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 8.—A reform program, designed to purge the commercial banking and business of all taint of speculative leadership and calculated to reduce the present overlords of the New York money market to a position of relative impotence, was proposed last night by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the governing board of the Chase National bank.

The proposal came in connection with an announcement that the bank had decided to divorce its security affiliate, the Chase Securities corporation. The plan involves inclusion of all commercial banks in the federal reserve system.

Calling for the complete separation of deposit banking and investment banking, even to the extent of forbidding private bankers to take deposits or to be directors of banks of deposit, the program strikes directly at the position of J. P. Morgan & Co., the members of which are directors of some of the largest commercial banks of the city and who hold important foreign and domestic deposits.

Opposes Powerful Interests.

In his statement Mr. Aldrich, who is a representative of the John D. Rockefeller interests, largest stockholders of the Chase, and who succeeded Albert H. Wiggin as executive head of the Chase organization last January, not only condemned the policies of his predecessor, but in effect declared his opposition to some of Wall street's most powerful figures and their particular interests.

In so doing Mr. Aldrich did not spare his own bank, for the Chase National organization, as it is at present constituted, violates almost every one of the principles he advocated. Coming at a moment when the financial community is shaken by the nation-wide bank closing, the declaration is calculated to strike down what little opposition remains to a drastic reform of the entire banking system. It was looked upon tonight as convincing proof of the readiness of Wall street leaders to scrap old ways and begin anew.

Shows Change in Ideas.

One phrase used by Mr. Aldrich—"I do not think, however, that the Glass bill goes sufficiently far"—illustrates how far the change of opinion among the banking leaders has gone. It contrasts with the valedictory of Mr. Wiggin, delivered on Jan. 10, which expressed the conviction that abolition of security affiliates would be "very ill advised."

In addition to declaring for a complete divorce between the security business and the business of commercial deposit banking, Mr. Aldrich asserted that no corporation or partnership should be permitted to take

BIG SHIPMENTS OF LIVE STOCK DEPRESS PRICES

Nearby Farmers Rush In Supplies by Truck.

Live stock markets struck a snag yesterday when farmers in the feeding area tributary to the Chicago market decided to capitalize on the recent sharp advances in prices. Truck shipments were rushed in from all points within 100 miles and set a record for one day.

Instead of the expected 3,000 cattle showing up, the final tally reached 8,000 head. The hog run went up to 18,000, exceeding the advance estimate by 10,000, while sheep receipts totaled 11,000. Rail shipments from distant points were smaller than usual, but total offerings were more than ample for all needs.

Hog Prices Drop Sharply.

The hog market crashed 25 to 40 cents and closed 50 cents under the high point on Tuesday. The general average price of hogs sank to $3.85, while top sales halted at $4.15. Current quotations still are 50 cents above the low point of last week. Large local packers were the principal buyers in hogs.

A break of 2 to 3 cents per pound in the wholesale price of fresh pork loins warranted cautious buying. Many of the smaller interests remained out of the market entirely. Eastern demand also was at low ebb.

Cattle Lose Recent Gains.

Cattle prices were carried back to last week's closing levels. Trading developed into a lifeless peddling affair. Local packers were the leading buyers. Three loads of 1,039 to 1,060 pound steers sold at the $7 top. The majority of the steers sold at $4.25 to $6, with a load of dairy bred steers averaging 1,050 pounds at $3.25, the low price for steers of beef merit. Most cows sold at $2.50 to $2.85.

Lambs lost 50 cents of the recent advance in a slow trade. Top sales of fed western lambs at $5.75 were only 20 cents above the low point of last week. Salesmen resisted the decline until late in the afternoon, when the bulk of the good to choice kinds sold to packers from $5.50 to $5.75.

STEEL INDUSTRY SEES RECOVERY FROM LETDOWN

Holiday Sends Output Down to 15%.

There is a feeling in the iron and steel trade that once the banking situation has been relieved business will proceed with greater acceleration than has been in evidence thus far this year.

This statement was made yesterday by Iron Age in its weekly survey.

Bank Holiday Cuts Output.

The bank holiday has resulted in a sharp decline in the volume of steel business and production. Ingot output declined from the 17 per cent of last week to 15 per cent, according to the survey. Mills are said to be rolling mainly on orders placed a week or so ago, indicating further contraction unless conditions are changed.

"One of the chief obstacles in the placing of steel orders is the inability of buyers to finance freight charges," Iron Age says. "Some metal working plants have closed down because of lack of funds with which to meet payrolls and other obligations.

Auto Industry Delays Orders.

"The automobile industry has held up a considerable tonnage, but in the main customers are taking steel that is ready for shipment."

Although foreign exchange markets are suspended, the paper asserts that the Japanese have inquired for 1,000 tons of tin plate.

LOREN MILLER BOND OWNERS TO GET '32 INTEREST

Cash Ready, According to Security Firm.

BY AL CHASE.

Bondholders in the Loren Miller & Co. buildings at 4722-38 Broadway and 4713-33 North Racine avenue, now occupied by the Goldblatt Brothers department store, will be notified as soon as the present bank holiday is over that funds are now available to pay the defaulted interest due July 1, 1932.

According to the letter to be mailed by the Greenebaum Sons Investment company, the owner of the property [Loren Miller & Co.] has made available out of funds other than income from the Goldblatt Brothers' rental a sufficient sum to pay the July 1 interest to such bondholders as deposit their bonds under the plan of reorganization.

Taxes to Be Paid.

Arrangements also have been made, it will be announced to the bondholders, whereby Loren Miller & Co. will pay all unpaid taxes, plus penalties for the years 1929 and 1930, amounting to $34,143, as well as the ground rent.

The letter states that a new lease has been signed by Goldblatt Bros., Inc., for a fifteen year term, with an option on the part of the lessee to extend the term for five years more at a minimum rental of $60,000 annually to Aug. 1, 1934. Thereafter the rental is to be 2½ per cent of the gross sales with a minimum guaranty of an amount sufficient to pay ground rent, taxes, special assessments, and insurance.

Up to Bondholders.

This lease has been placed in escrow and will be effective only if the reorganization plan, to be submitted to the bondholders, is carried out prior to Sept. 30, 1933.

The four story Uptown hotel, adjoining the Goldblatt store on the south, was underwritten by an S. W. Straus & Co. bond issue of $500,000, since paid down to $381,000, which is now being reorganized. It is understood that the first floor of the hotel probably will be leased from Loren Miller & Co., owners, for their store expansion. George Dovenmuehle of Dovenmuehle, Inc., is arbiter in the negotiations for this store expansion.

DOLLAR LITTLE OFF IN FOREIGN BOOTLEG TRADE

Europe Sees Squeeze of Short Sellers.

34 francs today. It was between 30 and 31 at the start of the week.

Poland will officially quote the dollar today, as the national bank will again purchase American funds. The rate is expected to be 8.60 zlotys, compared to a former rate of 8.90.

At Berne, Switzerland, the dollar was unofficially quoted at 5 francs.

Canadian Dollar Gains.

MONTREAL, Que., March 8.—(AP)—The Canadian dollar gained new prestige in world markets today. A sharp upward swing on European exchanges was coupled with reported demand for Canadian dollar credits to pay for Canadian goods.

The French franc was chosen by financial experts here as a yardstick for comparison because it is a gold currency. Over the week end the franc was quoted at 4.80 cents in Canadian money. Today quotations were varying between 4.71⅛ and 4.72.

Further evidence of the improved position of the dominion's currency was furnished by sterling quotations, which at one time today were as low as $4.10, compared with $4.16 yesterday. The pound had not lost its recent advance in the gold comparisons, as it would still buy 88 francs, yesterday's closing figure.

3 FIRMS SETTLE OIL CRACKING PATENT DISPUTE

Officers of the Universal Oil Products company announced yesterday that after protracted negotiations an agreement has been reached between Universal, the Gasoline Products company, and the Sinclair Refining company over the licensing of oil cracking patents.

The Universal and Gasoline Products companies are two of the largest concerns in the oil cracking field. By the agreement they were given authority to grant their licensees the right to use Sinclair patents. In return Sinclair Refining received the right to use Universal and Gasoline Products patents.

Universal officials said the agreement involved the payment by Sinclair Refining of a "substantial" amount of money, in addition to the assignment by Sinclair Refining of a group of its cracking patents to Universal.

H. H. Halle, president of the Universal company, said the settlement "will, in my judgment, be of great value to licensees of Universal Oil Products and to the refining industry generally. The Sinclair company had threatened our licensees and the licensees of Gasoline Products company with numerous suits on its patents. These suits will not now be prosecuted."

ALDRICH URGES PURGING BANKS OF SPECULATION

Chase National Head Joins Reform Move.

deposits, unless it is subjected to the same regulations as commercial banks and is required to publish a statement of its condition. Such a ruling would force the private banking houses of Morgan, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and others to disclose for the first time the extent of their capital and resources.

What Reforms Would Accomplish.

The reforms suggested by Mr. Aldrich would curb the power of the large private investment banking firms in three respects.

First, by depriving these firms of the right to accept deposits, they would make it necessary for the private banks to obtain credit from the commercial banks in financing their securities flotations.

Second, by doing away with the security affiliates of the commercial banks, the proposed regulations would take from the private banks outlets for the syndicating of their securities which have in the past been of great importance.

Third, by removing all private bankers from their positions as directors of the commercial banks, the changes would greatly reduce the prestige, influence and "inside information" available to the partners of investment houses at present.

Senate Quiz Started Move.

It has only been since the recent disclosures of the practices of the National City company during the boom years, before the senate committee investigating stock market prices, aroused widespread popular feeling that the Wall street community has gone over in large numbers to the side of the reformers.

The National City testimony was followed by the resignation of Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the bank and its affiliates, and of Hugh B. Baker, president of the National City company. On Tuesday night James H. Perkins, newly elected chairman of the board of the National City, announced that the bank had decided to divorce its affiliate.

WIS. POW. & LT. PFD. DIVIDENDS ARE RESCINDED

Dividends on the preferred stocks of the Wisconsin Power and Light company have been rescinded because of the bank holiday. Cancellation of the dividend was announced by the receivers for Middle West Utilities company, the parent concern.

Stockholders yesterday voted to reduce the 146,000 shares of common stock from $100 to $50 par value, which results in the creating of a capital surplus of $7,309,000. The surplus will be used to absorb losses on abandoned property and other losses. A. P. Gale and R. G. Walter were elected to the board.

Cord Corporation.

I have $100 with which I wish to make an investment in stocks. What can you tell me of Cord corporation? —P. P.

Cord corporation was incorporated in 1929. It is an operating and holding company, specializing in automobile and aircraft fields. It has broad corporate powers and holds substantial interests in Auburn Automobile company, Lycoming Manufacturing company, Columbia Axle company, Limousine Body company, and Stimson Aircraft. In 1932 it exchanged its Century Air Lines and Century Pacific Air Lines holdin, for 140,000 shares of Aviation corporation, which brought its total holdings in the latter to 500,000 shares.

Cord is reputed to hold a majority of the 211,000 shares of capital stock of Auburn Automobile.

The outstanding item in the income statement covering the year ended Nov. 30, 1932, is profit of $1,897,000 from trading in securities. Sales were $2,174,000, stock dividends ere $59,000, cash dividends $306,000, and other income was $303,000. After deductions net income was $1,524,000, or 67 cents per share.

For the preceding year profit from trading in securities was $293,000, sales $2,517,000, stock dividends received $310,000, cash dividends $350,000, and other income $262,000. Net income was $583,000, or 26 cents per share. Net income for the Nov. 30, 1930, year was $1,477,000, or 65 cents per share.

On Nov. 30, 1932, current assets were $9,096,000 and current liabilities were $382,000. Cash was $1,959,000 and marketable securities were $6,095,000. Working capital was $8,715,000, against $5,499,000 the year before.

There is no funded debt. Capitalization consists solely of 2,260,000 shares of $5 par capital stock. An initial dividend of 10 cents a share is payable March 15.

The capital stock is speculative.

St. Paul Union Depot.

The inclosed clipping shows that you rated Cincinnati Union Terminal bonds sound. I attempted to get two or three, but the price was above par. I have been told that St. Paul Union depot bonds are just as good. I am writing to you for your opinion on them.—C. R. H.

St. Paul Union Depot company first and refunding 5s, due 1972, are guaranteed as to principal and interest by Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Chicago Great Western, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railway [part of Chicago and North Western], Great Northern, Minneapolis and St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie, and Northern Pacific Railroad companies.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP)—COFFEE—Spot, prices held firmly today with Santos 4s quoted at 9¾@10c and Rio 7s at 8¼c. Business, however, was moderate. Roasters were said to be placing fairly large orders for Brazilian coffee in the cost and freight market at prices ranging from 8.30 to 8.50 cents for Santos bourbon 3s and 5s.
